MR. AND MRS. CORDELL HULL

In today's installment of his memoirs, former Secretary of State Hull tells of the important role filled by Mrs. Hull in directing and conducting the social activities essential to his success as a diplomat. He relates that he kept her constantly informed regarding all questions and persons important to him and "she scrupulously guarded every secret. I never knew her to make a mistake in conversations with diplomats and statesmen abroad as at home."

INSTALLMENT III

MEMORIAL custom required the secretary of state to go out almost daily to luncheons or dinners, especially dinners. Whatever the beneficial effects of this practice, there was no doubt that it absorbed much time and energy. I did not hesitate to make my decision on the social question. I said to the members of the diplomatic corps:

"I can go out almost daily to luncheons and dinners with you, with the result that I'll be unable to see and confer with you except to a limited extent and you'll have to see my assistant secretaries of state instead. Or I can refuse to go out to luncheons and dinners with you, with the result that I'll be able to see and confer with you myself at greater length. I prefer the latter."

His Program for 12 Years

This met with general approval, and I think it worked much to the advantage of all concerned. My evenings were freer for the study of documents and papers I took home to read. My days were free for discussions with ambassadors and ministers and members of the department. During the 12 years to follow I carried out this policy with only such infrequent exceptions as official and diplomatic situations seriously called for.

Mrs. Hull proved invaluable in assuming the burden of what official life remained. She took personal charge of the arrangements for the dinners I had to give to visiting statesmen, and the annual state dinner to the President. When I attended conferences abroad, I made social calls on the wives of the delegates such as I was not able to make on the delegates themselves.

Some public men, often by mutual understanding, refrain from disclosing the secrets of their official and public affairs to their wives, who remain content to pursue their own courses relating to family and to the duties of rearing a family. I kept Mrs. Hull constantly informed, however, regarding any and all questions and persons having any importance to me. She scrupulously guarded every secret. I never knew her to make a single mistake in conversations with diplomats and statesmen abroad or at home.

Although I eschewed social activities whenever possible, I allowed myself one diversion that proved of great benefit to me in body and spirit. Late of an afternoon once or twice a week of good weather, to clear my thoughts and get a little relaxation in preparation for the tasks I knew lay ahead, I would take three of my associates with me for a game of croquet on the lawn of "Woodley," Henry L. Stimson's home. Croquet became my only sport, even in the eyes of friends who did not as much occasion to play as I grew to be something of an expert.

TO SOME, CROQUET may seem a hoity-toity, but it is really a very scientific game. A player must give it his full attention or he has no success. Four or five times a season I could go completely around the croquet ground without stopping. I let two or three of the other players begin first. Then I started off from the first pole and began to contact them and take them with me so as to play off of them.

On one occasion Harry McBride, formerly my assistant in my office and later administrator of the National Art Gallery in Washington, brought in a "ringer," introducing him to me as an old friend. It later developed he was the champion croquet player of a certain section of the United States. Nevertheless, I won, probably due to the champion's unfamiliarity with the grounds.

It was not often that I could play a game through without interruption. Sometimes Stimson came out to talk to me. At other times I received urgent telephone calls from the department, even from the President. And frequently officers of the department arrived with papers for me to go over and sign before they left the department for the evening.

Croquet proved highly satisfactory to me because it took my mind off my work at times, and because it took me out into the open air and sun. But in my last

SOVIET DECREE TIGHTENS UP IRON CURTAIN

Prohibits Russians from Talking to Foreigners, Foreign Office Excepted.

By The United Press

MOSCOW, Jan. 28—The Soviet government prohibited Russians from talking to foreigners today and designated Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov's foreign office as the sole clearing house for contact with the outside world.

The only exceptions to the blanket decree were the ministry of foreign trade, which may handle foreign contracts with permission of the foreign office, and such working people as clerks, waiters and ticket sellers.

The clerks and waiters, however, were warned they must restrict their conversations with foreigners to the "limits of their usual functions" on penalty of prosecution under the criminal code. Punishment was not specified.

Can't Answer Questions

Any Soviet official other than those in the foreign ministry approached personally by a foreign diplomat must not discuss the question asked. Answers must be limited to an explanation that the inquiry must be directed to the ministry of foreign affairs.

The decree was passed Dec. 16 by order of the supreme Soviet to tighten state security. It was published yesterday in the official gazette.

The decree provides that all representations made by foreign nations or individuals, regardless of their nature, must be handled only by the ministry of foreign affairs.

In the case of certain economic matters, representations may be handled by the ministry of foreign trade with the approval of the ministry of foreign affairs.

Any written communications received by Soviet officials from foreigners must be forwarded immediately to one of the two ministries, which will answer the correspondent directly.

Rules of Procedure To Come

The decree said that rules of procedure for high officers of the armed forces in dealing with foreign military, air and navy attaches will be promulgated by the council of ministers upon application of the ministries of foreign affairs and armed forces.

This apparently left the way open for each case to be ruled upon separately.

Those exempted from the prohibition on talking, but not from the ban on general discussion, included workers at postal and telegraph offices, railway and air ticket windows, customs, police, fire department, ambulances, first aid hospitals, savings banks, bookstands, restaurants, theaters, museums, exhibitions, information bureaus and the housing offices of buildings in which foreigners were living.

The greatest effect of the decree was expected to be on the people. For the past two years all ministries and important government organizations have shunted any direct requests for information to the ministry of foreign affairs. The decree merely makes this practice compulsory.

It was expected that the Voks organization for foreign cultural relations and the Soviet information bureau, which have been open to newsmen, embassy personnel and tourists for limited types of information, would continue to function.

MARION MAN GOING IN FOREIGN SERVICE

Edward Moon Leaves To Accept Post in Greece.

Edward Moon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Moon of 148 Union street, has accepted a position in the government's foreign service in Greece and expects to leave for Washington, D. C. today enroute to Europe.

Mr. Moon leaves a job with the bureau of census in Washington for the foreign service. He had been with the bureau since his discharge from the Army Signal Corps. He was a first lieutenant.

Graduating from Harding High school in 1934, he obtained his B.A. degree from Ohio Wesleyan university in 1938 and his M.A. from Ohio State university the following year.

In the summer of 1938, he and his brother, Jack, now operating a grocery in Marion, went on a tour of Europe, where he became interested in entering the foreign service.

His job in Greece will be as a statistician for the department of the Army and he expects to be stationed in Athens.

Mr. Moon's father operated a grocery on Davids street for a number of years. He retired recently because of ill health.

State Orders Drastic Reduction In Use of Gas As Cold Lingers

Dorothy Kirsten, Eugene Conley In Marion for Concert Tonight

DOROTHY KIRSTEN

By EDNA S. DUTTON

Blonde, blue-eyed Dorothy Kirsten, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, arrived in Marion last night to open the Marion Community Concert association's current season at the Palace theater tonight. Sharing the program with her will be Eugene Conley, American tenor, whose career in opera has brought him before audiences in Chicago, New York, Mexico, Ohio's Cincinnati and many other musical centers.

With their accompanist, Marcel Frank, and Miss Kirsten's secretary, the singers arrived in Marion after what turned out to be almost a day's trainride from Fort Wayne, Ind. where they appeared Monday night. A delayed train caused them to miss connections at Lima and continue their journey to Upper Sandusky where they were met by Mrs. Karl W. Schell, president of the local concert association.

Miss Kirsten's Career

Making her debut on Dec. 4, 1945 in Puccini's "La Boheme," Miss Kirsten has successfully recreated one role after another as Juliette, Violette and Marguerite and Marion opera patrons saw her last year in "Madame Butterfly" and "Faust" at Cleveland. Her American concert debut took place in the summer of 1940 in the Court of Peace at the New York World's Fair and that fall she signed her first opera contract. A protegee of the late Grace Moore, Miss Kirsten appeared as soloist at the Lewisohn Stadium in the opening concert dedicated to Miss Moore's memory.

Miss Kirsten is happily married to Edward McKay Oates, CBS director. Swimming, skating and dancing, together with collecting doll replicas of her operatic roles are among the things she likes best to do, and in addition to her success in her chosen profession she is a linguist, speaking Italian, French and Spanish.

"Singing as a career?"—Miss Kirsten's advice to would-be opera stars is, go into it if you feel it is your vocation, but it is difficult; "unless you have stamina, and what it takes to meet the obstacles one is bound to encounter don't think about it."

Mr. Conley's School Days' Start

Mr Conley began his singing career as a member of the high school glee club, later studying in Boston, and New York vocal coaching, opened the way for his radio engagements with such leaders as Toscanini. His promising operatic career was cut off by three and one-half years' service with the Army Air Forces. Upon leaving the Army he immediately resumed his operatic career, appearing in the United States, Canada, Holland and the Paris Opera Comique.

If it is possible to like one opera more than another—and he enjoys singing them all—for Mr. Conley it is "La Boheme." Tonight with Miss Kirsten he will sing the duet, "O soave fanciulla," from Act I in which Rudolpho, the poet, loses his heart to his frail and pretty neighbor, Mimi when she knocks at his door to borrow a light. It is when they discover their mutual love that Rudolpho sings: "O lovely child, O sweetest vision" and Mimi answers "How sweet the voice of love."

Miss Kirsten and Mr. Conley have been on tour this season since early in the month. Mr. Conley has had a busy season and most recently has been in Minnesota, where he gave six concerts with the Minneapolis University extension.

Mr. Conley has "fun" on his concert tours, because he enjoys meeting people, and making friends and singing for them. But seriously, he adds, there are many more professions in which the road is easier, and unless you really want to do it and have the will to keep at it, his advice to boys and girls is to think twice before deciding.

What does Mr. Conley think of our mid-west near zero weather?—he's a New Englander and is taking it in his stride.

Miss Kirsten and Mr. Conley will

SENATE BACKS M'CABE CHOICE

Ready To Go Along on Replacement of Eccles as Board Chairman.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 — The senate seemed ready today to go along with President Truman's choice of Thomas B. McCabe to replace Marriner Eccles as federal reserve board chairman.

There was some grumbling by admirers of Eccles, but an informal poll of the senate banking committee showed that eight of the 13 members have no objections to McCabe.

Four said they have definitely decided to vote for him and four others told reporters they see no reason now for refusing.

Chairman Tobey (R-NH)—not one of this eight—promised a formal statement later on what he called Mr. Truman's "rather amazing action" in demoting Eccles to vice chairman.

Sen. Taylor Shocked

Senator Taylor (D-Idaho) termed the proposed switch "shocking", but did not say how he intends to vote. Neither did Senator Fulbright (D-Ark), although he declared it would be a "mistake" to strip Eccles of the chairmanship he has held since Feb. 1, 1936.

McCabe is a Republican industrialist who has been chairman of the Philadelphia federal reserve bank since 1939.

Actually, the senate will vote merely to confirm him as a member of the reserve system's board of governors. The choice of chairman is up to the President. He announced yesterday that McCabe is the man if the senate confirms the appointment. No house action is required.

CONGRESSMAN SMITH FILES CANDIDACY PAPERS

Petitions of his renomination as the Republican candidate for congress in the 8th Ohio district were received from Congressman Frederick C. Smith Tuesday at the Marion county board of elections office. The papers were mailed from Washington.

He is a candidate for a sixth term.

Erwin Approved For Richwood Postmaster

The United States senate has approved the nomination of Robert E. Erwin, 28, for postmaster of Richwood, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington today.

He is an Army Air Force veteran of the European theater and has served seven years as a clerk and nine months as acting postmaster of the Richwood office.

He started working in the postal service as a clerk in the Richwood office in 1937, and continued in that capacity until his induction into the army. Upon his return from the service he worked as a clerk until his appointment as acting postmaster in April 1947.

Blaze Causes $3,000 Loss

Hot Ashes Start Fire in Residence; Three Driven from House.

Firemen from the Central and Mark Street stations fought a stubborn fire at 469 Mary street for two hours this morning. Damage to the residence occupied by Richard E. Gruver was estimated by Fire Chief Owen A. Sifritt at $3,000.

Robert Cass, fireman from the Central station suffered first degree burns. The fire was caused by a bucket of hot ashes which had been placed alongside a wooden coal bin, the chief said.

The alarm was turned in by phone at 8:01, by neighbors. Gruver had left for work shortly after 7:30. Mrs. Gruver, her sister, and her infant daughter were at home at the time. Mrs. Gruver said dense smoke swirling up from the cellar prevented her from reaching the phone. She grabbed the baby and ran out of the house, she said.

Firemen on arriving found the nearest hydrant frozen, hampering efforts to fight the blaze, which spread from the cellar through partitions to upstairs rooms.

Cass was hurt when a gas meter in the cellar melted open, escaping gas igniting in a quick flare up.

Chief Sifritt said an attempt had been made to turn in a box alarm at Mary and Joseph streets but whoever ran to the box failed to pull the hook down and the alarm was never received at the station. The glass on the alarm box had been broken and the key turned but the operation had not been completed. It was not learned which of the neighbors had attempted to send in the box alarm.

UAW-CIO TO ASK 3RD ROUND PAY INCREASE

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 28 — The CIO United Steelworkers announced today its 170-man wage policy committee has been called to meet here Feb. 18 "to prepare a program to lay before the steel industry calling for an increase in wages."

It was the first definite announcement that the union will seek a "third round" of post-war wage boosts. It did not indicate just how much more money would be sought.

The union's contracts run to April 1949, but provisio was made for the wage section to be reopened by request on April 1, 1948.

The union's international executive board will meet in Pittsburgh Feb. 16 for a preliminary session. The executive board is composed of the national officers and 36 district leaders. The wage policy committee consists of union members elected in each of the 36 districts and executive board members.

OHIO FUEL CO. DIRECTED TO CUT SERVICE

Emergency Grows Worse as Mercury Again Falls Below Zero.

An emergency created by sub-zero temperatures in Ohio led the state utilities commission in Columbus today to order a drastic curtailment of gas service to safeguard the "public health, safety and welfare." The Associated Press reported.

As the thermometer readings in Ohio dropped as low as minus 27, the commission ordered the Ohio Fuel Gas Company, serving half the state, to curtail "to the fullest possible extent all use of gas not immediately essential to public health, safety and welfare."

The company supplies gas to approximately 2,000,000 customers.

Earlier, both Ohio Fuel Gas and the East Ohio Gas Co., supplying northeastern Ohio, had stopped all deliveries to industrial users.

More than 20,000 persons were made idle throughout the state as plants, depending upon gas for fuel and heat, closed down.

Marion Situation

Marion officials of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., report the gas situation here as critical with the pressure getting steadily lower, and no hope for an improvement in the future until the cold weather moderates.

The commission's order may be applied to places of entertainment, churches, schools, department stores, beer and liquor establishments.

However, a company spokesman said the order will not be enforced against restaurants, food and grocery stores and office buildings.

The office buildings were excluded, he said, because the company could not determine immediately if such buildings contained physicians' offices or other persons whose services are necessary to public health.

Mayors, police and county commissioners in communities served by the company will be contacted immediately so they can help inform commercial users, E. C. Overbeck, vice president of the company, said.

The order will remain in effect until the emergency is declared ended by another commission order.

Demand Exceeds Supply

The company told the commission its normal demand was 820,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily and that restrictions to industrial users had cut that figure to 537,000,000.

Despite this, the company added, the demands today are 93,000,000 cubic feet more than it can supply.

The propane plant at Perrysburg can supply 7,000,000 cubic feet today and then it will be exhausted. The plant is an emergency standby facility for supplementing the company's supply of natural gas.

The company's propane plant at Mount Sterling, capable of supplying 40,000,000 cubic feet daily, was exhausted two days ago.

Overbeck expressed fear that service to homes would suffer if the present cold wave continues until Sunday, as forecast.

Already the pressure in mains at Sidney, in western Ohio, and in Worthington, a suburb of Columbus, is so low that residential consumers are in danger of a shutoff, Overbeck reported.

The commission's order does not apply to companies which buy gas, wholesale, from Ohio Fuel Gas. These include Dayton Power & Light, Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co., Delaware Gas Co., the West Ohio Gas Co. at Lima, the Western Ohio Public Service at Greenville, and the Arlington Natural Gas Co, in a Columbus suburb.

In Columbus the company sent 150 employes—repairmen, meter readers and general office workers

200,000 IDLE IN AUTO PLANTS

Gas Shortage Hits "Big 3" Hard Blow in Detroit Area.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Jan. 28—Some 200,000 Detroit workers were idle today as the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co.—faced with a new cold wave and a natural gas shortage—cut off fuel deliveries to industrial plants for at least a week.

Hit by the blow that crippled the auto industry's production here were the "Big Three" of the car manufacturing world — General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp., and the Ford Motor Co.

Briggs Manufacturing Co. and scores of smaller industries also were affected. The order suspended gas deliveries from 4 p. m. yesterday until next Tuesday.

The gas company's move, forced by what President Henry Fink called "the most critical situation the company ever has faced," came just a day after 200,000 auto workers returned to their jobs following a weekend suspension of fuel supplies to industrial users.

Coldest Siege in 12 Years

It was blamed on the longest siege of cold weather to grip this section of the country in 12 years. Low temperatures also were responsible for idling 15000 workers in the Pittsburgh district—most of them victims of industrial gas supplies curtailments.

Ford apparently will suffer less by the sweeping order than other big auto producers, since it maintains its own standby gas equipment at the River Rouge plant.

However, production at the Highland Park plant was sharply curtailed, and continued operations at the tractor plant were dependent upon success of a plan to preheat forgings. The Ford Lincoln factory, which normally would be affected, is closed for model changeovers.

Chrysler Closes

About 50,000 of the 70,000 Detroit area workers employed by Chrysler were laid off as the hard-hit corporation shut down seven plants. General Motors closed its Chevrolet gear and axle and Chevrolet forge and spring plants, idling 11,000 more auto workers.

A GM spokesman said the corporation's Ternstedt, Detroit transmission and Fisher body plants probably would be affected, and the Cadillac factory is down for a model changeover.

Briggs shut down completely, idling 21,000 workers, but production was maintained in the Hudson Motor Car Co. plant.

Michigan Consolidated reported two factors, a sharp cut in the gas volume received from Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. and its own inability to manufacture artificial gas, were involved in the suspension of industrial gas.

Orville Wright Suffers Second Heart Attack

By The Associated Press

DAYTON, O., Jan. 28—Orville Wright, 76-year-old co-inventor of the airplane, was reported unchanged today by Miami Valley hospital where he was admitted yesterday, following his second heart attack since last October.

Attended by a private nurse, Wright "rested easily" during the night. His physician, Dr. A. B. Brower, said last night the aviation pioneer's second attack was not as severe as the first and that Wright was "much better this time."

LACK OF GAS CLOSES PLANT AT BUCYRUS

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, Jan. 28—The General Electric Co. lamp works here closed down at 10:30 a. m. today as a result of the critical shortage of fuel gas.

Company officials said they had been asked by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. to shut down 100 per cent. The plant employs approximately 350 persons, 40 or 50 from the Marion area, officials said.

Date of resumption of production will be announced.

46 BELOW IN COLORADO

In Plain Words

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON

TOMORROW the Republicans start trying to ram through congress a 1948 income tax cut for you.

Don't get excited. This is just the start. The road is full of bumps before you get a tax cut at all, if you get one.

This is the Republican plan, starting out:

1. Cut taxes in such a way that 7,000,000 people who have had to pay 1947 taxes won't have to pay any in 1948. They're the lowest income people.

2. Do this by cutting taxes from 100 per cent for that lowest income group to 10 per cent for the richest people.

3. Do it by cutting taxes a total of $6,300,000,000.

James Marlow

That's a lot of money to take away from the government when it has big expenses to pay.

So any tax cut that finally comes through congress probably will be less than $6,300,000,000, a good deal less.

And President Truman is pretty sure to try to kill with a veto the Republicans' kind of tax-cut bill.

And it will stay killed unless the Republicans in congress can get a bunch of Democrats to vote with them to over-ride the veto.

If they can do that, then the Republicans' tax cut will become low. That's some time in the future.

WHY IS MR. TRUMAN against the Republicans' idea of a tax cut?

Because any bill they put through will mean that much money lost to the government.

Mr. Truman, too, wants income taxes cut. But he wants any money lost to the government that way made up by raising corporation taxes.

The Republicans are against that.

A lot of Democrats in congress, maybe most, will follow Mr. Truman's lead and give the Republicans a rough time.

The house starts to debate the Republican [illegible] tomorrow and will vote about Monday.

THE REPUBLICANS in the house—and in the senate, too—hav ea majority and can put through any kind of bill they want.

But they may agree to a smaller tax cut than the $6,300,000,000 cut they're talking about now. Why?

Because some Democrats who'd fight against a $6,300,000,000 cut might go along with the Republicans if they'd agree to a smaller one.

If that happens in house and senate, the Republicans may pick up enough Democratic votes to over-ride a veto by Mr. Truman.

It needs only a simple majority vote in both houses, which the Republicans have, to pass a bill.

But if a bill is vetoed by the President, it's killed unless both houses can repass it by a two-thirds vote.

TO GET THAT TWO-THIRDS vote, the majority Republicans must win some Democrats over to their side.

Anyway, when the house gets finished voting next week, the house-passed bill of some kind will go to the senate for debate and vote.

The senate may not vote for weeks, or longer.

What would the Republican bill do for you, a taxpayer?

If you're a big taxpayer, you'd pay less taxes in 1948 than in 1947.

If you're one of the group which would get a 100 per cent, you'd have to pay no taxes at all this year.

If you're in this lowest income group and already have paid some 1948 taxes by having taxes withheld from you, you'd get a refund.

DEVISE MATERIAL TO TRAP BACTERIA

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 — A bacterial flypaper is a new aid toward keeping rooms freer of disease germs.

It's a chemical that can be put on floors, blankets or curtains to catch and hold tiny organisms, including those that cause colds, when they settle out of the air.

Unlike flypaper, it doesn't kill. But it does prevent the organisms from escaping and circulating up to human noses again when treated surfaces are disturbed by walking or other movements. Ultraviolet light and some vapors can be used to kill any organisms floating in the air.

The chemical is an oil and a detergent, added to make the oil mix in water, that looks and feels like cold cream. It has no odor and can be applied as an invisible coating that won't change the feel of fabrics or flooring, says L. S. Green, whose firm produces the material (called Germseal).

Small amounts can be added to water when floors are washed, or to rinse water when blankets or other fabrics are washed. The washing removes the trapped organisms.

Wartime tests at Camp Carson, Colo., showed that during period of activity in wards the number of streptococci in the air was reduced 86 per cent when fabrics and floors had been treated, Green said.

Marion and Wyandot Ditch Petition Filed

A petition for repair and improvement of the Carroll joint county ditch has been filed by Nellie Martin and others, with the Marion county commissioners.

The Carroll ditch, in Salt Rock township, lies on the boundary between Marion and Wyandot counties and is the responsibility of both boards of county commissioners.

Both Wyandot and Marion county commissioners met here Monday for an organization session at which they elected Carl H. Lehner, Marion, county chairman, as president of the joint board.

The joint board set Feb. 13 for viewing the ditch, while Feb. 19 the hearing on the ditch petition will be held.

Ad in The Star Brings Response From Germany

A letter from Germany, written Dec. 14 by a German woman living in Obernhausen, Mrs. Emma Genth, was received several days ago by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Snow of 614 East Church street.

She wrote that she noticed the address of Snow's Racket Store in an issue of The Marion Star and decided to write to him. The letter was addressed to the store at 123 South Main street.

Mrs. Genth wrote: "Excuse me for noticing your address but sometimes a persons is driven to do such a thing, because the war did not go by without having trouble. One son lost his leg below the knee and the other lost his life."

She added that she has seen people in Germany who are fortunate enough to receive packages of foodstuffs from America and expressed the wish that she too had a friend who could help a poor family. She especially made a request for coffee or tea. In closing, Mrs. Genth wished lots of luck and blessings in the new year to Mr. and Mrs. Snow.

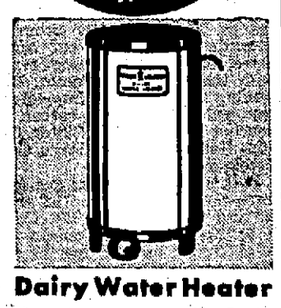

The letter was written in German. Her address as she gave it in the letter is Emma Genth, 14a Obernhausen, Kr. Calw, uber Neuenburg, Germany.

POWER SHOVEL OUTLOOK GOOD

Statement by Pres. Gracely One of Plant Magazine's Features.

A feature of the January issue of "The Marion Scoop," published by and for employes of the Marion Power Shovel Co., is a review of last year's plant operations, and a general forecast for 1948 by Harvey T. Gracely, president of the company.

Other articles include an announcement of plans for an annual dinner-meeting of the 25-Year club of the company at which about 24 new members will be enrolled, an outline of plans for operation of a plant in Cambridge as a manufacturing division of the main plant here, and account of Roy Jacoby's 50th anniversary year with the company, and results of a recent balloting held among employes on the question, "Do you prefer the new style, longer dresses?"

In his review of the company's past year's accomplishments, Mr. Gracely said the year 1947 ended with a higher sales volume than any previous year in its history and that employes can well be proud of the record of accomplishment which was set.

Inflation a Factor

"However, in all fairness," Mr. Gracely said, "it must be said that part of the additional dollar volume has been the result of inflation and such portion may well distort accurate comparisons with other years."

Mr. Gracely also said he looks with confidence into the new year. He explained that business capital outlays continue at a high rate which means that more and more power excavators will be needed and that unfilled equipment orders remain large. Mr. Gracely further stated that "the saturation point in the use of excavating equipment has not yet been reached but it may be the part of prudent wisdom to recognize that it may not be far distant."

Banquet Date Set

The third annual dinner-meeting of the 25-Year club of the Power Shovel Co., held in honor of veteran employes whose continuous service with the company has covered a period of a quarter century or more, has been set, tentatively, for Saturday, Feb. 21, in the Masonic Temple, according to a story in the issue.

In the article on the outline of plans for operation of the Cambridge plant recently leased by the company, it is explained that an engineering study is under way to determine the changes which will be needed to adapt the plant and facilities to the manufacture of Power Shovel Co. products. A schedule for full capacity of the Marion plant for 1948 has been approved, the item states. It is explained that two sizes of walking draglines will be built at the Cambridge plant and that the management hopes full production of these machines will be under way before the latter part of 1948. Parts of some of the machines in the Marion plant schedule will also be fabricated and manufactured at Cambridge.

To observe the occasion of his half century of service with the Power Shovel Co., anniversary of which fell on Sunday, Dec. 14, 1947, Mr. Jacoby, field engineer, mining division for the company, held "open house" in his office Friday afternoon, Dec. 12, and received calls from scores of friends and acquaintances in the plant.

"New York" Loses in Vote

As a result of the balloting on the subject concerning new style, longer dresses for women, employes in the departments and offices were undeniably not in favor of the "new look," according to an article in "The Scoop." It reported the total tabulation registered 110 "no" ballots, 26 "yes" ballots on the question as stated in the ballot, and seven on a "volunteer" ballot, making a total vote of 143. The "volunteer" ballot, originated by a plant employe, read "The best-dressed woman is the one who dresses in the way most becoming to her."

TRUMAN'S BUDGET HIT BY OHIO C. OF C.

By The United Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 28—The Ohio Chamber of Commerce today rejected President Truman's budget recommendations for increased spending and urged drastic slashes in federal expenditures.

Reduction in federal financial extravagance, the Chamber said in a statement, would serve a two-fold purpose — tax relief and a curb on inflation.

In addition, the Chamber said, there is need for prompt adoption of a "rational, over-all reduction in excessive burdens of the personal income tax" and a long-range program of other tax reforms. These tax reforms would include lowering of maximum individual income tax rates to 50 per cent, allowance of income splitting by married couples for tax purposes, the eventual lowering of corporation and excise tax rates, and return of death and gift taxation to the states.

The Ohio Chamber, in an analysis of the President's tax and budget program, charged that the Truman recommendations "would add billions of dollars to the already dangerously high federal expenditures and set in motion another round of price increases."

The analysis was prepared by C. D. Laylin of Columbus, and E. M. Elkin of Pittsburgh. Laylin, general counsel of the Ohio Chamber, is chairman of the federal taxation section of the National Association of State Chambers of Commerce. Elkin is chairman of the Federal Finance Committee of the national association.

It is emphasized that the bed of the Mississippi river is being lowered at an average rate of one foot every 5,000 years.

STUDENT NURSE TRAINING OPENINGS ANNOUNCED

Applications are being accepted by the civil service commission for student nurse training at St. Elizabeth's hospital in Washington and for adjudicator positions in the veterans administration in that city and throughout the United States, it was announced today by F. To qualify, applicants must have been graduated from an accredited four-year high school and must have completed at least 16 units of study, including four units of English, two of mathematics, two of science and two of social studies.

Information and application forms may be obtained from Mr. Bryant, at the Marion postoffice.

HOW MUCH CAN SHE PRODUCE?

That's a good question to ask right now because if you can get more milk per pound of feed consumed you have reduced cost of production.

They do it on the Research Farm by adding Dr. Hess Stock Tonic to the ration. The Tonic cows produce as much as a fourth pound more milk per pound of feed consumed.

What's Ahead for Palestine

Strong Resistance of Arabs Against UN Partition Looms

(One of a Series of Articles)

AS THE United Nations starts to oversee the partition of Palestine, the Arabs are prepared to resist with every weapon they have.

This has been made clear by numerous recent developments such as the Arab country leaders calling on all Arabs "to prepare for the struggle." It is safe to assume that Arab leaders will not hesitate to increase the spilling of blood to prevent carving up of the Holy Land.

A prominent part was played in the Arab deliberations by Haj Amin El Husseini, exiled mufti of Jerusalem who is noted as an advocate of extreme means to attain his objectives.

The mufti and his followers not only hold complete control of the Arab higher committee, principal Arab organization inside Palestine; they also have the firm backing of the Arab country governments which surround the Holy Land.

Arab Warning

Only a few days ago, one high Arab leader in Palestine warned that the UN's newly created five-member Palestine commission face the possibility of assassination if they entered Arab-controlled areas of the Holy Land.

Under the general assembly's plan to partition Palestine, the commission is obligated to set up provisional governments in the proposed Arab and Jewish countries. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to do this without entering Arab territory.

Any physical harm to a member of the commission or even to a member of the UN staff, which will accompany this body, would undoubtedly confront the UN with one of the gravest problems in its history.

No provisions have been made, however, to provide protection of any kind for the commission after the withdrawal of British troops, now scheduled to be completed by Aug. 1.

It will be difficult for the commission to fulfill its obligations under these conditions, but it may find that a more serious problem than the threat of violence is the threat of non-cooperation.

It has been pointed out that the Un has enough potential strength to overcome violence eventually. But Arab non-cooperation might even jeopardize the success of the proposed Jewish government by making it economically unsound. Most of the UN delegates who supported the partition plan agreed that the formation of an economic union between the two projected countries was one of the prerequisites for success of the plan, since neither would be economically self-sufficient.

If the Jewish country is established without the economic union, the UN might have to provide for continuous economic assistance from outside the Holy Land to maintain the new government.

MARION SEEKS HOSPITAL AID

Delegation Will Attend Public Hearing in Columbus Thursday.

A representative from each of eight Marion organizations will accompany Mayor Harry L. Dowler and Safety-Service Director E. O. Uncapher to Columbus tomorrow afternoon to attend a public hearing on a federal-state plan to increase hospital facilities in Ohio.

Mayor Dowler, seeing in the plan a possible solution to the serious need for increased facilities here, asked the heads of representative and interested Marion groups to designate one of their number to help represent the city at the hearing.

In Marion Party

These representatives will make the trip: Mrs. E. G. Siefert, Women's Hospital Board; H. E. Webster, Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Walter Hane, Federation of Women's Clubs; Edgar Barnhart, Manufacturers Council; Ellis Oiler, CIO Council; Dr. J. W. Bull, Marion Academy of Medicine; Wilbur Highland, Marion Central Labor Union and Dr. Frederick T. Merchant, of the hospital staff.

Hearing at 1:30 P. M.

The hearing will be conducted at 1:30 p. m. in the State Board of Health office in the state office building. The report of the state health department will be made public at that time, relating to the needs of Ohio for hospital facilities.

This report is to be the basis for the recommendations of that department to the surgeon general of the United States for aid in hospital construction to cities and communities under the Federal Hospital Aid bill, Mayor Dowler said.

The bill gave authorization to congress to appropriate $75 million a year over a five year period to underwrite hospital construction approved under the plans submitted by the various states and approved by the surgeon general.

State health officials have indicated some attention has been given Marion in the Ohio plan, a report on which is expected to be forthcoming tomorrow in Columbus. It is the hope of Mayor Dowler that Marion has been earmarked by state health department officials for increased hospital facilities and possibly a new hospital.

Business Will Be Better
In the Heart of Ohio
BECAUSE $4,150,000 WENT TO WORK
During 1947 the Ohio Company supplied $4,150,000 of new capital to Central Ohio Industries—capital which will create jobs, establish new markets, provide new products, open new business opportunities.
This investment banking service is called "underwriting" . . . The Ohio Company, as underwriter, purchases an issue of securities of a corporation, paying cash which the corporation can use immediately to expand its business. The Ohio Company distributes the securities to investors, providing them with opportunity to put their savings to work for a well-managed company.
The $4,150,000 of Ohio Company underwriting during 1947 went into industries producing and distributng meats and foods . . . into companies whose products are used in building construction and heating equipment . . . to a major distributor of motor car parts . . . to a leading producer of pharmaceuticals for doctors and druggists.
These dollars at work perform a genuine service for their owners, for the companies which hired them, and for the many suppliers, employees and customers of those companies.
As investment bankers it is a very important part of our job to make available the dollars which are the lifeblood of industry. We are grateful for the opportunity to serve both investors and management in the financing of sound business in Ohio.
Our continuing efforts are pledged during 1948 and the years to come to help build a better Ohio by making our underwriting facilities available to an even larger number of Ohio business concerns.
Here's Where Dollars Went To Work
Following is a list of the securities underwritten by The Ohio Company during 1947:

Roving Reports By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK — GENIE is a big-muscled spook who steps out of a ...e cloud and says, "Did you ...room service?"

...e will then grant you any ... Suppose one of these fugi...s from Aladdin's lamp came ...on some moonlit midnight and ...l give you the power to confer eternal life on any one person in the world."

Who would you choose? I'd pick the greatest vegetarian of them all—George Bernard Shaw, the red-haired Irishman who began his career looking like a carrot and has been whitened by the years to the semblance of a streamlined cauliflower.

Hal Boyle

Why? Well, to begin with I wouldn't want it myself. The average man's yearning for earthly immortality wears out as his experience with the world increases, monkey glands and social security benefits notwithstanding.

For that reason I wouldn't wish it on Professor Einstein or some other great human landmark. Not unless I was sure he wanted it. Nor would I have the heart to inflict it as a curse on my worst enemy. Who's that mad at anybody.

The last gent the school books record as having been granted eternal life wasn't Ponce De Leon, who failed to find the fountain of youth in Florida but did beat the first bookie there by 10 minutes.

It was Tithonus, a Trojan gigolo. Tithonus was the son of a King of Troy and the boy friend of Aurora, the goddess of dawn. She liked her playfellow so well she finally got Daddy Zeus to make him immortal.

BUT THERE WAS a gimmick—she forgot to ask eternal youth for him. So Tithonus kept on living but grew old and shriveled and crabbed. Aurora became so embarrassed by this elderly escort that she shut him up in a chamber and kept him in a cradle, where the poet says his voice "flowed on unceasingly."

The morn goddess finally got Tithonus changed into a grasshopper—amid the laughter of the gods.

She would have met a man of tougher fiber had she picked on George Bernard Shaw, the meatless wonder of the literary world. Of course Shaw, one of the most moral men who ever lived, would have made the rosy goddess keep her distance, anyway.

The voice of Shaw, like that of Tithonus, does flow on unceasingly. But there the resemblance ceases. The voice is witty, reasoned and forceful—still speaking the clearest king's English of any Irishman since Dean Swift.

ALTHOUGH SHAW IS a self-professed physical coward, his life has been one of endless battles, most of which he picked himself—and he still has a lance for every windmill, whether it's steak-eating or vivisection, both of which he's agin.

A Barnum of the highbrows, no man ever praised himself harder and few ever lived up to their estimate more. He didn't actually say he was a better dramatist than Shakespeare. He was more subtle—he just rewrote Shakespeare to show how he could be improved.

Puckish and elfin as ever, this acidulous Santa Claus, having outlived two generations of critics, is composing another drama in his ninety-second year and still finding time to engage in postcard debates on religion with American college students.

He is currently Broadway's highest paid dramatist. His "Man and Superman" revival is outdrawing that upstart Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" by $7,000 a week—and Shakespeare is being helped by Katherine Cornell.

MOST OF THE $4,000 a week Shaw gets from capitalistic America goes to support the Socialistic austerity of Britain, but Socialism is what he asked for long ago. Most of those who hooted him then are dead, but Shaw is still in there helping pay the bill to keep going one of the few crusades he's won.

He has another old play on the boards in London, and a second production in rehearsal here. The money keeps pouring in like a golden shower on the bearded old boy, who lives almost as simply as Gandhi and is his only rival as a lettuce eater.

Time, misfortune and fortune ignominy and fame, hatred and acclaim—all have failed to dent the splendid armor of this emperor of jesters. Who else alive has entertained the world more, enjoyed living better, or kept his faith—for all his idiosyncrasies—unshaken for so long?

Who else could get more fun out of eternal life and teach us more, than Bernie?—he who once said with a profundity above the implied egotism:

"You should live so that when you die God is in your debt."

U.S. UNPOPULAR IN N. AFRICA

Thanks to Clever Communist Campaign, American's Aren't Wanted.

By The Associated Press

TUNIS, Jan. 28 — Americans aren't wanted in North Africa, thanks to a violent propaganda campaign by the Communists.

The Communists have gone so far as to print charges that caskets brought in by the U. S. graves registration service contain machine guns.

Few impartial Frenchmen believe such charges, but nervous government officials seek to avoid stirring up of any agitation whatsoever in uneasy North Africa. Consequently, from their point of view the blunt truth is "the fewer Americans the better."

The Pertinent Facts

After a trip of several thousand miles from Morocco through Algeria and Tunisia, it was found:

1. In Morocco, American business attacked for "Trojan horse" operations; for seeking to "encourage Morocco to throw off French rule."

2. In Algeria, the American consulate charged with demanding "vital military secrets" about French airfields; an American graves registration staff of 31 officers and an enlisted man described as a military spearhead to eventual occupation by U. S. troops.

3. In Tunisia, the American graves registration service accused of smuggling in arms in caskets destined for repatriation of half of the 7,000 war dead, and an American air line attacked as a "blind" for the U. S. Air Force because it enjoys certain landing rights at the Tunis airpirt.

Source of Trouble

American sources say the Communist campaign is inspired mainly by fear, because "the Nationalist parties have made it known that they count on outside help."

The Communists, this source said, "fear that if North Africa gets its independence due to any pressure on our part they will be left out in the cold, just where they are now in France."

He cited as an example the increased violence of Communists here following the visit last year to America of Habib Bourguiba, exiled (in Cairo) leader of the top Tunisian independence party.

The American source said U. S. policy in North Africa was guided by two points: (1) The desire for peace and security, and (2) attempts to persuade the French to be more liberal in their attitude toward Nationalist claims.

WAR DEPARTMENT FILM SHOWN TO GROTTO CLUB

A social meeting was held Monday night in the American Legion Dugout by the Grotto club. A moving picture, "Defeated People," a war department release dealing with conditions in Germany since the end of the war, was shown by the Army recruiting staff of Marion. The meeting was one of a series of social events to be held monthly in the future. The next regular meeting of the lodge will be held on Feb. 2 in the Masonic Temple.

Ye Ancient Marriner

MONETARY policy under the Truman administration being as it is—the unknown element of inflation—it will take the financial columnists and off-the-cuff experts a couple of weeks to figure out why Marriner S. Eccles has been eased out of his chairmanship of the federal reserve system's board of governors by presidential edict.

Meanwhile, the people who merely spend money, leaving the manipulation to those with courage, like Ed Pauley, can properly be impressed with the fact that Mr. Eccles held his job for 12 years, lacking a few days. He started Feb. 1, 1936, after a brief warmup climbing the Washington ladder from an assistantship to the secretary of the treasury.

Apparently, the reason he is stepping down to the vice chairmanship of the federal reserve board at this time has something to do with the report he has locked horns with Treasury Secretary Snyder, who is from Missouri, whereas Mr. Eccles is from Utah. That is not the right state to be from in a battle of rights within the Truman official family.

Anyway, he survived the big depression, the big war and the big wind. As vice chairman he may still have a ringside seat for the big crash that comes next on the official program.

The Whoops Boys Are Back

SOMETHING still needs to be done about the whoops boys in American public life, especially Washington. These are the impatient laddies and lassies who get the dandiest ideas anybody ever had for giving away other people's money, then get sore because the other people want to have something to say about it.

They're pouting now because a few old meanies have asked a few legitimate questions and made some reasonable suggestions about European aid. One of the meanies was Herbert Hoover, who suggested that there may be more to giving away irreplaceable materials than writing down billion-dollar sums on the backs of old envelopes. Mr. Hoover also wants to consider certain other places that may need aid—nothing sensational, just ordinary things that will come up sooner or later. Bernard Baruch also has thought of a few, such as how much production it's going to take to follow through on a European aid commitment and where it's going to come from with production per man-hour still lagging. This makes him an old meanie too. In fact, everybody who doesn't say "Whoops!" at the thought of helping Europe—and let it go at that—is an old meanie.

This sort of thing became fashionable in Washington about 14 years ago. The whoops boys still spring out of the woodwork whenever someone suggests a few more billion dollars.

Necessity Is a Mother Again

IF NECESSITY is the mother of invention—and it is in most cases—something will come of Britain's idea that western Europe should become a federation to save itself from Red Russia.

Necessity is the need of doing something to keep from following Romania, Bulgaria and Poland into the Russian bear's mouth. Invention would be some form of European union to get the greatest possible good out of the economic aid forthcoming from the United States.

Such a union would be of no immediate importance, but if it worked it could make a European federation become in time a "third force," the new world being one and Russia with its slave and satellite states being the other.

Europe has talked about federation for years, always with enough necessity to be the mother of some new invention for collective security. But it never has talked with as much necessity as the threat of Russian invasion of western Europe, which is why the chances for federation, formerly 1,000 to 1, now can be quoted at 500 to 1.

It's the People's Money

PUBLIC confidence in European aid would be helped by early proof that it will be handled as an economic project, not as a strategic move in the cold war with the Soviet Union.

The issue between Secretary of State Marshall and the senators opposing his request for state department control of European aid is really nothing more than a minor disagreement over the best way to assure the American people that the aid will be economically sound.

The same men are in full agreement that it should be economically sound; Mr. Marshall wants it administered one way, his critics want it administered another way, that's all.

They recognize that taxpayers must have confidence in its administration and that the best way to build confidence is to put its administration in the hands of men with actual knowledge of the needs of European industry. With due respect to the state department, its function is dip-omacy, not business administration.

Perhaps the most ticklish part of the aid plan—and the least discussed for that reason—is its relationship to the growth of state socialism in countries that now expect capitalism to come to their rescue. Apparently the United States is going to close its eyes to this irony but only if it is assured that the help it sends abroad is geared to economics, not diplomacy. It should help producers, not ideological parasites on production.

Scanning the Record

By George E. Sokolsky

Budget To Take Big Chunk of U. S. Income.

THIS is something that Americans need to remember: expenditures of the government for the fiscal year 1948, according to Mr. Truman's budget, will come to 16 per cent of the estimated gross product of the nation. That is, it will amount to 16 per cent, if production keeps up, if we are as prosperous as we have been. In 1940, the expenditures of the government amounted to 9.8 per cent of the estimated gross national product.

In 1940, the total expenditures of government amount to $9,297,000,000; in 1947, they amounted to $42,505,000,000; in 1948, $37,728,000,000; in 1949, they are to be $39,669,000,000. We shall be spending more than four times as much in 1949 as in 1940. This, of course, includes the cost of the war, which we are now and shall be for years paying off. Even taking into consideration the lower purchasing value of the dollar, does the individual American have the money to spend? For it is he who spends it, out of his earnings. Every dollar of it comes out of his earnings, sooner or later.

SOKOLSKY

President Truman and Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder take the position that they have to have that $39,000,000,000 no matter where it comes from. If the congress wishes to take some off one place, it must be back on somewhere else. Hand everybody $40, as a sop, and slap it onto the price of goods by requiring business to pay it. Mr. Snyder admits that his surplus ought to be around $7,000,000,000, but then the Marshall plan will cost about that. Give the surplus away, but do not, under any circumstance, permit any American to keep more of his earnings. There is a bit of war psychology in all this—too much of it for the country's good. The administration wants money for elbow room.

Difficult To Understand

Do you understand either the philosophy or the arithmetic of this? Probably not. You are not alone—even its authors do not understand it, is their testimony before congressional committees indicates.

Now we come to subsidies. A subsidy is a tax on the whole population in the interest of a particular group. The principal beneficiaries of subsidies are farmers. The proposal to roll back major food and agricultural prices while guaranteeing the farmer an assured price means higher subsidies in exchange for lower prices. But it also means higher taxes. What is the difference whether you pay more for your bread in the grocery store or more for your bread though taxes? This ought not to be had to understand.

There is a theory going the rounds that business can afford an increased tax because of higher than usual profits. The assumption is that American business is something in a vacuum, something that meets around the board table of the National Association of Manufacturers. Actually, the corporate business of the United States is owned by approximately 15,000,000 Americans, to say nothing of the partnerships and small store and shop owners. Besides, much of American business is owned indirectly by mutual savings banks and life insurance companies that hold mortgages on buildings and land. In a word, taxing American business is placing an additional burden on the American people, on the earnings of a huge number of individual Americans, the actual owners of these businesses.

Incentive Needed

Congress might investigate the number of enterprises that changed hands during the past five years because taking a capital gain or loss is more profitable than earning a profit. The silliness of this idea is only equal to the silliness of the concept. Why should a man sell his business but continue in its management? They do it every day. This country needs more production and every incentive for more production is taken away from possible investors of capital. In fact, if these high taxes continue, the number of investors will constantly decrease, only those with inherited wealth having any reservoirs of capital. Whoever talks about increased production and increased taxation, produces an unreal paradox. Give the American people a chance to use their own earnings and they will expand as they always have in the past.

But the first essential is to cut taxes—and to cut them way back.

Two Can Pay More Promptly Than One

A survey just conducted by the University of Chicago shows that unmarried males are the worst credit risks.

But maybe, with married men, it's the old story of assuming their credit must be good because everybody has some of it.

A married man's credit is like an oyster-man's knife. He uses it so much, it has got to be good.

The Marshall plan is the big thing now on the international scene. But it'll never take the place of the Installment plan on the home-front.

As for unmarried men, they are not only the hostess' delight but also the credit manager's dilemma. As a consequence, though they personally are unattached, oftimes their property isn't.

Still, however, poor pay a man may be, there is consolation in the thought that sooner or later he'll probably get married and settle down . . . and up.

What Inflation Does To City

From Talk by Mayor Kauffman of St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS is a victim of inflation. But unlike other victims, it has not been permitted to help itself out of its predicament. No one has come to its rescue. As a result, we are today literally fighting for our life.

The degree of inflation which this nation has suffered may be measured by the cost of living index of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. In 1940 this index stood at 100.2. At that time our municipal revenue fund receipts were just under 22 million. By last year, our receipts had risen to 27 million; but, in the meanwhile the index had soared to 156.2. In other words, while costs went up 56 per cent, the city's operating income advanced only 24 per cent. Because St. Louis has always been one of the most cheaply operated municipal governments in America, only a small amount of retrenchment is possible without inviting complete collapse. We could not possibly retrench or economize, to a degree sufficient to offset the constantly diminishing purchasing power of our money.

The cost of living has been on the ascent since 1940. At first, however, the city was more or less able to keep pace for the reason that tax collections improved and there were fewer delinquencies; and, furthermore, taxes based on volume of sales increased, But, as all of you know, inflation is an insidious force; and it was not many years before certain favorable aspects, such as better collections, were more than counter-balanced by runaway prices.

Also during the war years, our staffs were short-handed, much needed equipment could not be obtained and maintenance was deferred. These factors, while certainly not desirable, held down operating expenses. But we would not want to run our city indefinitely as we were forced to do by the exigencies of all-out war.

At the end of the war, the aforementioned cost of living index stood at 129.3. By then, our city income had risen about 18 per cent, but because we had been operating on a wartime basis, we had been more than holding our own.

From no matter what angle one studies the problem, the conclusion is inescapable. The impending deficit cannot be blamed on poor tax collections—for they have been almost 100 per cent. It cannot be attributed to extravagance. It is inflation that has wrecked the financial stability of our city.

Teacher Shortage Still Acute

By Jane Eads

THE National Education Association reports the nation's schools are "definitely on the upgrade" from a wartime low but that their fundamental difficulties have not been permanently solved.

In its annual preview of conditions in education, NEA points up the following:

1. At least 2,000,000 children still are suffering major losses in instuctional opportunities as a direct result of the teacher shortage.

2. Classrooms are overcrowded. Many children go to school part-time. School building programs retarded by the war have not kept pace with expanding enrollments.

3. There is a deplorable lack of textbooks, school equipment, laboratory apparatus, library facilities.

4. Nearly a million children are transported to school daily in buses that are unsafe.

At the same time, the U. S. Office of Education emphasizes the need for expanding and improving educational plants from the pre-school level through the colleges and universities.

It estimates present educational plant needs and those which can be anticipated for the future at approximately $11,000,000,000.

The Office of Education says the need is in part created by increased enrollments, room overloading, local school unit reorganization, expanded curricular offerings, revised teaching methods.

Also adding to the need is an accumulated lag in school plant improvements and maintenance and the necessity for providing essential safety features and replacing substandard facilities.

Higher birth-rate levels, continuing longer than predicted, presage enrollment increases of about 5,000,000 in the elementary schools in the early '50s, to be followed later by secondary school increases, the Office of Education says.

The Cloud Like a Hand

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

WASHINGTON—The first evidence that the Soviet Union may be faltering in the course that has plunged the world into political and economic war is now in the hands of the American government. It suggests that the so-called hard policy, for which Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov is generally given credit, may be reconsidered by the politburo if and when the European recovery program passes the congress.

The apparent reason for this possibility is the fact that the resources of the Soviet state are already strained to the utmost, making it unwise for the Soviets to continue the present contest when American resources have been fully mobilized on the other side. In other words, when the strength of the United States is brought to the task of rebuilding western Europe, the strength of the Soviets will be insufficient to carry through their imperialist plans. Being realistic men, the members of the politburo will then abandon the attempt to do what is beyond their strength, and seek to make a settlement on the best terms they can get.

In short, we are in the position of Elijah, during his celebrated praying match with the prophets of Baal, when the little cloud like a man's hand at last appeared on the horizon. If at that moment Elijah had suddenly lost faith and joined the Baal-worshippers, one suspects that the Lord might peevishly have withheld the rain. But he went right on praying, and after the ensuing downpour, Elijah agreeably indulged himself in a general massacre of the pro-Baal faction. The Soviets are anxiously waiting to see whether we are as persistent as Elijah. If the cloud, which is the European recovery program, turns out to be the real thing, they will ask for terms rather than risk the misfortune of Baal's prophets. Consequently, far more now hangs upon the action of the senators and representatives than the congress even vaguely conceives.

Caution Observed

For this reason, it is tragic that these vital truths must be stated in such general terms. In the nature of things, however, the incidents upon which the foregoing conclusions are based are of the most secret nature. Those who have studied the origins of another great change in Soviet policy, in the state department documents, "Nazi-Soviet Relations," will have noted how guarded were the first overtures. The approaches to the Nazis were all made by the Soviets, in several different and highly delicate ways. But the whole process of rapprochment was so cautious that, even now, it is hard to say when the experimental phase ended and the real business began.

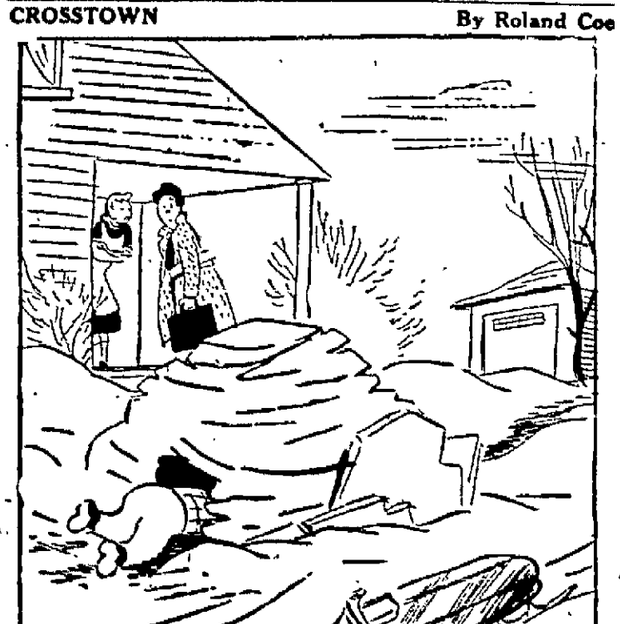

What has recently happened, moreover, must be classed as suggestive rather than decisive evidence that the Soviets may eventually alter their policy. The evidence consists of a series of seemingly unrelated episodes, in which Soviet officials have expressed to Americans all or part of the views set forth above. These episodes have ranged in character from a harangue delivered by a very junior Russian to a junior American in an interlude of the last big struggle at Lake Success, to other contacts of a much more important character.

ERP Seen as Test

They have held out interesting indications of the often-rumored politburo division on Soviet foreign policy. There have even been hints that the test of the validity of the Molotov view will be congressional action on ERP. Anyone who has had the experience of talking to Soviet officials or Communist leaders abroad, knows one of their cardinal arguments is that "you Americans are so changeable. You will never carry through the job you have started." Apparently, ERP is to be the test of the sticking-power of the United States.

Finally, the suggestive evidence of the episodes above-mentioned is further supported by other signs and portents. One such portent is the recent behavior of the Soviet embassy in Washington. Where his predecessor was almost cloistered, Ambassador Panyushkin is behaving much more like a normal diplomat, giving interviews, paying calls upon American officials, and in general making himself much more accessible.

Will be gathered one fine day;
Mid the mood of beer and pretzels
And the smell of peanuts hot
You may study our marine life
In a gay and dizzy spot.

Bring the kiddies down to study
All the types of things that swim—
Pack 'em in the subway coaches
With determination grim;
Fill 'em up with candied apples,
Buttered popcorn, lunchstand food;
Oh, it's great to study nature
In a cool, unhurried mood!

See the "greatest eel on earth," men!
Note the "wild man-eating bass"—
Watch the herring do the cooch dance
See the strip-tease shad. Some class!
Hurry! Hurry! Here's the mullet
From the wilds of Borneo.
This way, peepul, to the big tank
And the wild, untamed shadroe!"

Hear the ballyhoo boys spieling,
"See the great two-headed cod
And the double jointed catfish
From the River Pollywog
"Do not miss the Lady Kingfish—
See her twist and shake and squirm!
See the carp that eats the fishhooks
And ignores the little worm."

"Over here, folks, for the bullhead
With three eyes instead of two—
Watch the most ferocious crawfish
As it fights the snapper blue!
See the bugle-tooting skate fish
And the mackerel that sings.
Over here, folks, is the shiner
That has horns and feather wings!"

And the turtle climbs a fence;
See the race three-legged flatfish.
See the boneless bonefish! Gee!
It is great to study nature
Down at Coney by the sea!"

Cotton Corners

By TRUMAN TWILL

Dear Nephew: I did not like the reply you made to my letter of last week about the inefficiency of women doing housework. In the first place you called me a liar.

I am.

In the second place, you accused me of saying that women are inefficient because I also am inefficient and don't like to admit it.

That also is true.

In the third place, you charged me with being ungrateful to your Aunt Effie, who has been keeping my house for half a century and not letting the job turn her sour on life.

That's a lie.

I am not ungrateful. Your Aunt Effie has recovered from the grippe, I am glad to report, and is back on the job. She may not be efficient, but she gets things done with a minimum of sweat and pain. The highest compliment I can pay her is that she has prepared thousands of meals, most of them good, but never has slaved over a hot stove. She has kept the place clean, but never at the expense of anyone's comfort. She has not developed dishpan hands or ironing-board back. She never has taken housework seriously enough to let it interfere with her being a good companion. At the drop of a hat, in fact at the drop of an eyelid, she will gladly chuck the whole thing and go for a walk, a ride, or maybe just outside to look at something I want her to see.

If she had been an efficient housekeeper, I doubt if she would have been able to handle housework so efficiently, if you see what I mean. I have known a lot of efficient people in my day, except that I usually called them fussbudgets, meaning they were a pain in the neck as far as I was concerned. Whatever they did they did O. K. but the trouble was that they rarely did anything worth doing, except keeping their nose and everybody else's nose on the grindstone. But I've said enough about housework. The subject's worn out

We have a new dog—a Dalmatian pup eight months old. I believe in letting someone else have the grief of taking care of them while they're real young. This one's name is Checkers, and we got him because we needed something to sit by the side of the fireplace. Your aunt wanted a new chair, which would have cost $75. I bought the pup for $50, a net saving of $25. That's my kind of efficiency.

I have not felt like being sick with my winter attack of flu yet. It looks as if it might be February before I get it this year. I hate to be sick too late in February, though, because some years it gets to be pretty nice along toward the end of the month. I think there will be an early spring this year.

Say hello for me to all your folks. Keep sending me sympathy cards on account of my illness, which I will get sooner or later.

First Sodas an "Accident"

The smoothness and agreeable flavor of ice cream sodas must be attributed to art rather than to science. Nevertheless, the Franklin Institute reports what may be called the accidental discovery of the sodas, as we know it. Soda water with cream was served to devotees at the Exhibition of Manufacturers in Philadelphia in 1874. A vendor who ran out of cream gingerly substituted ice cream and found that the patrons welcomed the change enthusiastically.—O.S.U. Science and Appliances.

SPEAKER APPRAISES VALUE OF RELIGION

More Than 300 Hear Dr. Guyer at School Session.

More than 300 persons at the Marion County School of Religion Tuesday night heard Dr. Tennyson Guyer of Findlay speak on "Religion's Last Stand." Enrollment in classes of the school, held at First Evangelical and Reformed church, was announced as 240, with 31 churches participating in the program of the school.

Dr. Guyer declared: "In presentation of our belief, we are never sure of our influence. Religion today is the biggest thing there is, but is discouraged and misapplied. America is the most secure, most prosperous, most blest nation, and in most respects God's chosen people. Yet it has not been possible after 2,000 years to get the news of Christ's birth, life, death and resurrection to all peoples of this nation and to the world. News of the death of President Roosevelt reached every nation within 24 hours, but news of Christ's life has reached only about 50 per cent of our population.

"The church is the only institution in the world that takes you in without examining your past record, that does not number you, that calls you by name, that represents something that is useful which inspires for service."

He left a challenge to the effect that "If we want a better world we must live our religion."

Announcement was made that an evaluation dinner will be held Monday, Feb. 2, at 6 p. m. at First Evangelical and Reformed church for members of the school of religion faculty, students and guests. Reservations are to be made by Friday noon this week by calling 2548 or 4148, it was stated.

COMPANY TO KEEP RUSSIAN CONTRACT

By The United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Philip D. Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Co., said today his firm intends to ship to Russia electrical equipment which the Soviet Union ordered in 1945.

Reed made the statement Tuesday during testimony before the house foreign affairs committee in support of the Marshall plan.

He also reiterated his company's previous denial of reports that it had shipped to Russia atomic energy equipment similar to that which had been produced for the Oak Ridge project. He said equipment sent to Russia was general purpose electrical equipment.

Until there is a "top level" government decision to the contrary, Reed said, General Electric intends to abide by its contracts with Soviet Russia and to fill uncompleted portions of orders for electrical equipment. However, he added, no new contracts are contemplated.

"These contracts," Reed said, "were made in 1945 when it was the policy of our government to encourage commercial relations with Soviet Russia. They were entered into at arms-length and in good faith.

"Our company attaches importance to preserving the integrity of contracts."

MANUFACTURERS' COUNCIL HAS LUNCHEON MEETING

Twenty members and guests attended the regular luncheon meeting of the manufacturers' council of the Chamber of Commerce held at Hotel Harding Monday. He said Marion's directory is printed but cannot be shipped until the bindings are completed. Robert La Marche was in charge of the meeting in the absence of Edgar Barnhart, chairman, who is ill.

Relief At Last For Your Cough

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

Love's Perilous Path

By ADELE GARRISON

I WASTED no more time in farewells, for I knew how urgent was the need for us to get the bound and gagged prisoners out of the Veritzen apartment and into my fathers' custody. There must be no delay, and with that tension upon me, I said no farther word to Olga. But I blew a kiss to her as I reached the door, and she sent one back to me.

"You would better not come out, dearest," Philip told his wife as he escorted me to the door with his usual elaborate courtesy. "Those bound chaps aren't a very pretty sight, and there's no possible good you can do anybody by coming out there."

Olga Veritzen saves all her strength, her resourcefulness and her guile—her husband, I am sure, calls it guilelessness—for the big marital problems which occasionally loom up before her. On all minor questions she takes Philip's dicta as if they were commands from divinity, and he little realizes how she gets her way on any big issue between them.

I guessed that she was putting a little special deference into her reply to his caution, because of the necessary, if camouflaged, battle she had had to wage over the sending out of her signature, her handwriting and her note paper. And I was mirthfully reminded, when she spoke, of the old adage about "butter melting in her mouth."

"Whatever you wish, my dear Philip," she said. "You know so well what is best."

I had hard work to repress a chuckle at the expression on Philip's face. He was sopping his ego in her deference as if it were a waffle absorbing maple syrup, and I knew that Dicky's comment would have been the same that I had heard from him on another occasion when Olga was being extra dutiful and deferential.

"When Olga goes into her Patient Griselda act," he had said with an impish grin, "you can hear every pinfeather in old Phil's wings rustle as he elevates them. Boy, oh boy! Does he lap that homage up? The great queen, leaning from her throne to ask his advice! He never visualizes her except with a crown on her head, and a scepter in her right hand, you know."

"Yes, I know," I assented when I could speak for laughter, and mirth trembled dangerously near my lips again at the remembrance of my husband's stricture.

But I did not look at Olga again, for I was afraid that she might see the struggle I was having with my risibles. I was sure that from some far distant corner of her brain, she was laughing at herself and at Philip, but she could not have pardoned my amusement.

"Thank you dearest, for your trust in me," Philip said, and there was something in his voice which stripped the phrase of everything save the great love he bears his wife, and the homage he has paid her since their first meeting, he an officer of the Transvanian court, and she a visiting princess from a neighboring country, destined to wed the Transvanian crown prince, whose cousin Philip was "by bar sinister."

Philip and Olga had fallen deeply, passionately, in love, but the old king's edict had separated them, banished Philip, and finally engineered Olga's wedding to his son, afterward king of Transvania. Then, after many years, chaos had come to the kingdom, Olga, widowed, and her daughter, Olina, had fled from the country, and my father had been able to turn Philip's gallant but futile attempt at rescuing her, into a successful venture. And now, united, they were blissfully enjoying their autumnal years.

But I hastily closed my book of memories on that page as I came into the living room under Philip's escort. There was no time now for anything but action. The bound, gagged and blindfolded thugs were upon their feet, and I saw that the ropes binding their ankles had been loosened to permit them to walk in hobbled fashion. Dicky had one of them by the arm, and Mr. "K." the other, but judging by what I could see of their faces, two small children could have led them to the door. All the truculence was gone out of them.

Philip took his hand from my arm, and looked at his wrist watch. "Only a few seconds to the zero hour," he said, and I saw Dicky's lips twitching at the theatrical note in Philip's voice. Then, as if his words had been a cue, summoning other actors on the stage, the signaling knock Mr. "K." had ordered, sounded in the door.

"Right on the second," the Lansfield owner said with pride in his voice as he went to the door, opened it the length of the night chain, and then swung it wide open.

"The lift is here," one of the guards said, and, indeed, by looking through the door, we could see it waiting.

ghway Patrol Chief Reports Warnings to Motorists Increased 126½ Per Cent.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 28—eding is an important factor in e increasing number of traffic cidents in Ohio, Col. George ngle superintendent of the ate highway patrol, said today. otorists seem to be driving ster, he said, disclosing that ghway patrolmen had increased e number of written warnings ued motorists in 1947 by 126.5 r cent. These warnings were sued for speeding and other pes of reckless driving that ght endanger life.

Mingle said, however, that the ghway patrol had not adopted y change of policy in enforcement of the law against excessive eeding, but had merely broadened its traffic safety program.

The law says that a speed of 50 iles per hour or more can be nsidered prima facie evidence of reckless driving. But state patrolmen do not warn or arrest motorists going 50 miles per hour n highways, unless they consider a flagrant case of reckless driving.

"The particular incident is considered by the officer," Mingle said. He explained a patrolman takes into consideration the highway condition, and the volume of traffic, before stopping a motorist going 50 miles per hour or more, and in most cases a written warning is issued.

The patrol chief said more motorists probably are being warned at this time of year against speeding because weather conditions make highways unusually hazardous.

Patrolmen issued 127,523 written warnings in 1947 to motorists compared with 56,294 in 1946. Traffic arrests totaled 22,205 in 1947 against 21,077 the previous year.

Despite its broadened safety program, the highway patrol reported more traffic accidents in 1947 than 1946. Last year 16,968 accidents were investigated against 13,838 in 1946.

Air Force Transport Missing in Germany

By The Associated Press

FRANKFURT, GERMANY, Jan. 28—A United States air forces C-47 transport plane is missing on a flight from Istres, France, to Udine, Italy, air force headquarters at Wiesbaden announced today.

The number of crew or passengers aboard was not announced.

The aircraft left Istres, near Marseille, yesterday at 10:37 a. m. (5:37 a. m. E.S.T.) and had not been heard from up to 2 p. m. (9 a. m. E.S.T.) today.

FACES TREASON CHARGE— In Brooklyn, N. Y., federal court, ex-Sgt. Martin J. Monti rests his chin on his hand as he is arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edward Fay on charges of treason. Originally an Air Force lieutenant, Monti is accused of deserting his Army post in 1944, hitchhiking from India to Italy and stealing an Army P-38 to land behind German lines, where, it is charged, he made radio broadcasts for the Nazi propaganda ministry from Berlin.

RUSSIANS TAKE ART AS BOOTY OF WAR

By International News Service

BERLIN, Jan. 28—The United States Army newspaper Stars and Stripes revealed today that the Russians have taken art treasures estimated at $170,000,000 from the Dresden museum.

Raphael's world-loved "Sistine Madonna" was listed among the paintings removed by the Soviet forces as "war trophies."

In a special dispatch from its correspondent now touring the Soviet occupation zone, the Army newspaper said that some 1,700 paintings—the best of the museum's collection, once one of the world's greatest, were sent to Russia early in 1945, after the Russians took the city.

Left behind were only 1,231 paintings of lesser artists.

Hubert Semesch, in charge of the museum, declared that the $170,000,000 valuation of the treasures taken by the Red army is "conservative."

Among the works removed were masterpieces by the greatest artists of the Italian, Dutch, French and Spanish schools.

The Russian war booty included: Correggio's famous "Holy Night," 17 of Rembrandt's best works, and an equal number of Peter-Paul Rubens'; 24 Vandyck portraits; six Palma Vecchios; seven classic paintings by Poussin.

THREE AUTO ACCIDENTS LISTED IN CITY TRAFFIC

Three automobile accidents occurred yesterday without injury to the car owners, but with slight damage to vehicles, city police reported.

Cars driven by Paul Wood of 552½ North Greenwood street and Clarence Wiley of near Marion collided on Fairground and South Greenwood streets at 9:15 a. m. Tuesday.

At 4 p. m. Tuesday Ira Derringer of LaRue, driving his car west on West Center street, and Walter H. Crane of West Mansfield, who was preparing to turn off Center onto Curve street collided with slight damage to the two cars.

John A. Hiller of 505 Davids street, driving his car on South Main street at Center at 3:34 p. m., collided with a parked car owned by Dorthea Schwaderer of route 1 New Bloomington, resulting in damage to the rear of the Schwaderer car.

GERMANS AIM FALSE CHARGES AT YANKS

By The United Press

FRANKFURT, Jan. 28—Scheming fraulelns and other vengeful Germans have launched a campaign of false accusations against American soldiers, charging them with rape, manslaughter, assault and theft, Army investigators said today.

The Army said many of the charges made against innocent soldiers by Germans desiring revenge or money were "fantastic" but that the practice was being discouraged by sentences of one to three years in prison.

Investigators said the tendency to blame the Americans automatically and unjustly for German woes has always existed, but that recently it has become "much more aggravated."

They interpreted the trend as evidence of a growing anti-American feeling.

As an example, they reported the case of one German girl who heard a false rumor that the Army was paying 10,000 marks ($1,000) indemnity in cases where frauleins were raped by American soldiers. The fraulein immediately submitted a bill to military government officials claiming: "An American soldier raped me three times a week for six months, but he's gone home now."

Army agents said a Frankfurt nurse also joined the campaign. She told authorities a tale of assault and overnight kidnaping by two soldiers to excuse her nightlong absence from the hospital. Investigation disclosed she had spent the night with her German boy friend.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS COLUMBUS LAWYER

Fraud Problem Discussed by Henry J. Linton.

"Lawyer vs. Fraud and Chiselers" was the subject of a talk given by Henry J. Linton, Columbus attorney, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary club at Hotel Harding Tuesday.

Mr. Linton is a member of the metropolitan housing authority of Columbus.

Stating that "lawyers, while the butt of many jokes, are the most trusted men in the world," Mr. Linton described some problems and perplexities of a lawyer's professional life. He said it is as unfair to a lawyer to be called after shop hours for free advice as it is for any other worker to be called upon when his tools are locked up in his workshop.

He emphasized the necessity for lawyers sometimes to require a retainer in advance. He declared that in checking to be sure that a client isn't a fraudulent character, "an honest man won't mind and the dishonest man—you'll catch him."

Often a lawyer's fee may seem quite unreasonable for the small amount of work he has done, Mr. Linton said, but clients must remember that a person often profits a great deal from just a few minutes of advice.

"Use a lawyer like you buy insurance, and you will be able to fully appreciate him; and the lawyer will appreciate you as a client," Mr. Linton said.

A. Merle Hamilton, chairman of the Rotary program committee for January, introduced the speaker.

Guests at the meeting in addition to the speaker were W. Leonard Young and James E. Reed of Marion, Edward N. Sloan of Columbus, Art Dunham of Cleveland and A. L. Holloway of Bucyrus.

The reporter from Harding High school for the meeting was Joyce Layton.

To Salvage Autos On Icebound Barges

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28—Owners of 11 icebound barges, containing $500,000 worth of new automobiles, today considered a salvage plan of transporting the cars to shore over the frozen surface of the Ohio river at Newburgh, Ind.

Dennis Horlander, superintendent of the Standard Oil terminal, owners of the barges, said last night the attempt to save the 406 automobiles might be made tomorow if the river remains frozen.

The plan was proposed because of the possibility that a sudden thaw would cause the barges to be swept over dam No. 47, two miles downstream.

Automobile transport vehicles would be driven out on the ice to the barges, he said, and the new cars would be transferred to them.

THREATENED RAIL STRIKE CALLED OFF

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 28—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers today sent out messages from Cleveland headquarters calling off a threatened nationwide strike slated for Feb. 1.

The creation yesterday by President Truman of a fact-finding board to investigate a wage and working rule dispute forced a 60-day postponement of the strike of 138,000 railroad workers.

President Alvanley Johnston of the Engineers expressed doubt as to whether the messages could be delivered in time.

The Engineers Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Switchmen's Union of North America are seeking a 30 per cent increase with a minimum raise of $3 a day.

They have turned down a proposed 15 per cent boost which was accepted by two other operating brotherhoods.

The dispute was turned over to the President two weeks ago with the collapse of negotiations in Chicago.

MILITARY COSTS MAY CLIMB UP NEXT YEAR

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28— The nation may be asked to spend as much as $16,500,000,000 for defense next year if friction with Russia continues, senators disclosed today.

This would be 50 per cent more than President Truman has asked in his peacetime record budget for the 12 months beginning July 1.

The estimate of future military needs came from members of the senate armed services committee after a closed door conference with the high command yesterday.

They said Gen. Eisenhower, retiring Army chief of staff, and other top ranking generals and admirals advised that the Army, Navy and Air Force must be brought up to date quickly.

One senator said the reports of new staggering military costs dampened the chances that congress will approve compulsory military training any time soon.

Such a program would add about $2,000,000,000 a year to the defense budget.

By The Associated Press

Five Arabs, two British soldiers and two Jews were killed in scattered violence. This raised to 994 the unofficial toll since the United Nations voted Nov. 29 to partition the Holy Land.

Unknown attackers blew up a railway bridge near Sarafand.

In Cairo, Ahmed Hussein, leader of the Young Egyptian party said the Egyptian government has supplied several thousand rifles to Palestine Arabs. He said the guns were given to Haj Amin El Husseini, exiled mufti of Jerusalem.

In Damascus, Syria, informants said Palestine Arabs were being equipped with munitions obtained from Czechoslovakia in a $2,850,000 deal.

In Tel Aviv an attempt was reported to have been made on the life of Maj. Shlomo Rosenstein, Tel Aviv's Jewish police commander. A group of young, armed men reportedly tried to enter his apartment but alarmed neighbors frustrated the attempt. The men fled, firing many shots.

Memoirs of Cordell Hull

several years at the state department, as the work taxed my strength more and more, my doctor required me to taper off on the game, which probably proves it is more strenuous than most people think.

ANY TYPICAL DAY of my virtually 12 years at the state department could be called hectic, being hopelessly crowded with emergency problems calling for feverish activity on the part of my associates and myself. My entire tenure could literally be termed an emergency period. Every aspect of human nature and conduct in all part of the world passed before us as we strove to deal adequately with each vital question.

I always tried to reach my office between 9 and 9:10 in the morning, frequently walking from my hotel to the department. I saw my chief secretary first. During the early years this was Harry McBride, who was invaluable to me because of his experience, judgment, ability and diplomacy in dealing with people inside and outside the department. He was later followed by Cecil W. Gray, a marvel of vigilance, efficiency, loyalty and all equipment for sound service.

McBride or Gray brought in to me a large assortment of cables and other communications from all over the world, giving me analyses and estimates by our ambassadors, ministers, and consuls of developments and situations in the countries where they were stationed. He then gave me, in strict confidence, an account of any particular happenings throughout the department during the preceding day, with suitable suggestions. He next laid before me a list of engagements for the day.

AS I WENT THROUGH the stack of papers, telegrams and documents laid before me, I made decisions on them wherever possible, without further conference or investigation, and simultaneously sent instruments to appropriate officials in the department for carrying them out. I had to decide which were important enough to show the President for his information or decision.

I then called in the under secretary of state, first William Phillips, then Sumner Welles, and finally Edward R. Stettinius Jr., and gave him all information that would be useful to him in performing his functions. Next came the assistant secretaries of state and other key officials of the department for discussions of particular questions coming within their jurisdiction.

During the day requests nearly always came in for emergency conferences in my office. As each succeeding year of world unrest amplified our difficulties, I held more and more meetings with the key men in the department. Whenever a grave question arose, I called in every person in the department, from the top right on down the line, who could make a contribution to any aspect of it, and gave him an opportunity to state his views. Then, after the fullest conference and research, I always preferred to sit down and make my own final decision.

Occasionally a quick-acting person would charge me with being too deliberate, meaning too slow. The manifest answer to this criticism is that most of the mistakes raising in the conduct of our public affairs during the Roosevelt administration were due to haste and lack of deliberation, whereas my policy of being deliberate, while also being on time, resulted in a record that many of the best informed persons say was without a major blunder. The President, so far as I knew, entertained the view that I never led him into serious trouble either when he was at home or absent from the Capital.

MY FAVORITE WRITING instrument in outlining or going through documents was a red pencil. I used to keep four or five of these in my shirt pocket, to the horror of Mrs. Hull, who insisted they made marks on the shirt which were hard to get out.

One day, when an official of the department came to me to object to attending a meeting in the office of another official who was inferior to him in rank, I said to him: "If the Negro porter out there in the hall had anything useful to offer in connection with any problem I was interested in, I'd be glad to go out to his desk in the corridor and talk to him about it."

When I had anything of a secret nature to impart to any of my assistants, I sometimes said to him: "I am telling you this confidentially—and that does not mean to tell it confidentially to the first person you meet."

In receiving foreign ambassadors or ministers, I early adopted a practice of friendly informality. If my main office happened to be crowded with an important conference, I received the diplomat in a small, narrow room leading out of my office to the office of the secretaries. Later on I was to conduct, with British Ambassador Lord Lothian, in this tiny room with its almost primitive furnishings, the negotiations on the exchange of American destroyers for British bases. Thereafter, if a diplomat showed the slightest signs of disappointment in being received in this unimposing cell, I would at once recall to him the cheerful manner in which the British ambassador and others of the highest diplomatic rank had sat down with me there for the most important conferences.

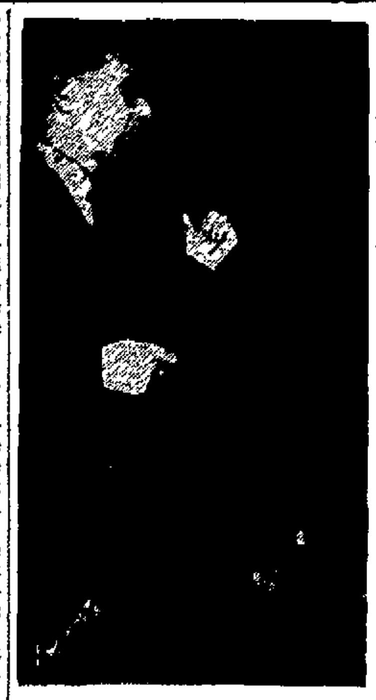

I SOUGHT TO RECEIVE a foreign diplomat in the same cordial, unassuming manner with which I would greet any other visitor. I treated him as I had treated Americans with whom I came into contact during my long political career. Generally I did not feel justified in giving the ambassador personal credit for the virtues of his government or hold him responsible for its sins. There were limited exceptions to my courtesy when instances arose wherein another government had acted outrageously or offensively. Then, from the instant of the appearance of the diplomat in my office doorway, I found numerous ways of receiving him with the utmost coldness and going almost to the limit in showing my resentment and that of my government. These instances principally concerned the Japanese ambassador in later years.

I made two rules, among others, in dealing with foreign ambassadors. One was to utter no threats unless we had the force and will to back them up. Threats without a backing of force were bluffs, and a bluff could be called with embarrassing results.

THE OTHER WAS to make no promises that were not certain of fulfillment. I used to tell my associates the story of the man who ran a small store in a town in Tennessee near the edge of a lake. One day he contacted a food company and offered to sell them a carload of froglegs. In due course a representative of the company arrived, and they signed a contract. After some months, when the froglegs were not delivered, the same representative returned. He found only a couple of froglegs in the store and asked the storekeeper why he had not lived up to his promise. "Well," the man said, "the frogs around the lake were making so much noise I thought there must be at least a carload of them."

The moment an ambassador or minister left my office, one of my stenographers entered automatically, by another door. I at once dictated to her an adequate account of the discussion, putting down as accurately as I could what he had said to me and I to him, and appending any written notes handed by one of us to the other. I cabled the substance of this memorandum to our ambassador or minister in the capital of the diplomat who had just called upon me, so that he could be kept fully informed of developments on this side; and other telegrams went out to our representatives in other capitals that might also be concerned.

CIRCUS SPONSORED BY CIO COUNCIL

Second Annual Indoor Performance Set for Feb. 6.

The second annual indoor circus of the CIO council of Marion will present Patterson Brothers Circus for two performances at the Armory Friday, Feb. 6, at 4 and 8 p. m., council officers announced today.

Children from the Marion county children's home and the Salvation Army, newspaper boys, and underprivileged children will attend the circus through the cooperation of local merchants and organizations, Harold Townsend, chairman of the circus committee, reports.

Because of the low ceiling of the Armory all the acts which make up the show will not be given. However all of the headline acts will appear, the management says. Among those listed are the Morris troupe of tight wire and tumbling acts, Captain Wolcott with his trained ponies and dogs, the Hodgsets performing with Roman rings, and Betty Gray, balancing on the rolling globe.

Chairman Townsend says all of these acts will be showing for the first time in Marion.

The show will arrive here from Lorain and upon completion of performances here will move on to Mansfield.

Letters from Our Readers

LIP SERVICE NOT ENOUGH

Editor of The Star: The latest contribution to the many schemes to rearm the United States, i.e. "An American Foreign Legion," (your editorial, Jan. 23) would appear to many citizens an easy method of discharging one's duty to his country—that of hiring someone else to do your fighting for you. Sen. Lodge may be correct in pointing out that by offering citizenship to these commercial soldiers, we would "gain some useful citizens that way." Well, if United States citizenship is that valuable to people of other lands, just how valuable do we here at home regard it, when we are willing to shrug our duties off with the statement that we have never been a militaristic country, etc. If there is need for a foreign legion, then there is definite need for some sort of training here, for Americans who do not have to be bribed to be willing to protect their country.

As a member of the American Legion, and of a Christian Protestant church, I find myself in a peculiar position. From our veteran groups come urgings to support UMT to the hilt. From our pulpits come admonitions to fight any sort of military training that will spoil the lives of our young men.

There are definitely two sides to this question. To the veterans' groups, I would say, if we are to have conscription requirng every young man to give some time in service of his country, then it is our duty as veterans to try to change some of the things that make military life so odious. Some strides were taken when the court-martial proceedings were revised, admitting enlisted men on the panel of judges. But many more steps remain, among them, the softening up of the morale crushing caste system; the habit of the inspector general's offices of whitewashing the Col. Kilians, the Gen. Lees, the countless others who received no publicity. The discouragement of the attitude that command and line officers have for most chaplains, that they are tolerated; nothing more. These things should be done first, before we can go all out for peacetime conscription.

On the other hand, while we must agree that the Christian church's idea of trusting in the power of God, rather than in the might of armies, is right, and ideal, there are great strides to be taken here also. We cannot, as Christians, write to our congressman asking that UMT be defeated, without also asking this same congressman to support the Marshall plan, and other measures that Christian United States should undertake, from the spirit of brotherhood alone.

And, after UMT is defeated, and we depend upon the "whole armor of God," let's not forget to put it on! It will mean that the lukewarm days are over; that we stop giving lip service alone, and really start living that Christian life. It means straightforward preaching from our pulpits, whether those words offend the best contributors or not. It will mean that Christian practices are followed on Main and Center streets, as well as in church on Sunday. It's a big order. Any believer will agree, that we must depend upon God's power But . . . if we turn down UMT . . . we must put on that whole armor of God. Let's not leave our country wholly defenseless.

[BR]ITONS SHOCKED BY LORETTA YOUNG

By The Associated Press

[LO]NDON, Jan. 28 — Hollywood screen star Loretta Young's [obser]vations about her recent [visit to] London hit the front pages [today]. The reaction generally was [shocked] but restrained: "Loretta, How Could You!"

[Mi]ss Young was quoted as saying British factory workers faint [every d]ay around 11 o'clock for [lack] of food. She said, according [to pu]blished quotes, that Englishmen have beards because there [are no] razor blades available, [that] people walk on cardboard [soled] shoes. She tromped on a [few t]oes when she said that fish—the partner of chips—is fried in paraffin because of a lack of fats.

British eyebrows were high.

The Daily Mirror printed Miss Young's comment under the heading:

"The Things Some People See," and suggested she had returned to America with "an aching heart for all the hunger and shivering she thought she saw."

The Daily Herald said it did not ordinarily print "fiction," but thought its readers might be entertained. An editorial gave the actress a sober lecture. It explained, in replying to another story assertedly told by Miss Young, about rationing. The actress had said that when she gave a little girl some chocolate, the child replied: "Do I lick it or bite it?"

Chocolates and sweets, said the Herald, are enjoyed today by a great number of English children "whose parents before the war couldn't have afforded to buy them as much as the present ration allows."

SOME STATEMENTS GARBLED, ACTRESS SAYS

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 28—Actress Loretta Young, commenting on London press reaction to her recent remarks about conditions in England, today made this statement:

"I have no apologies to make for any accurately interpreted statement I have made of conditions I saw in England but I do refuse to accept responsibility for authorship of inaccurate or garbled quotations attributed to me or quotations emotionally interpreted."

White Shrine Gives Humorous Program

A humorous program was presented by past officers when Marion Shrine No. 15, White Shrine of Jerusalem, met Monday night in the Masonic Temple.

The program opened with a skit on a meeting of the city betterment league with Mrs. Villa Neidhart, Mrs. Evelyn Williams, Miss Wanda Geddis, Mrs. Loretta Fies, Mrs. Mary Fisher, Mrs. Rose Helwig and Mrs. Grace Smith taking part. All were dressed in old-fashioned costumes. An old-fashioned grandmother was portrayed by Mrs. Helwig and a modern grandmother by Mrs. Goldie Miller. Reader for the two skits was Mrs. Wilmina Lynch. A style show was conducted by Mrs. Emma Bondley. Participating in the style review were Dr. J. F. Neidhart, Elmer Bondley, Arthur Creasap and J. E. Bonen.

The charter was draped for the late Fred L. Carhart, the ceremony including Miss Joan Lockwood singing "My God and I," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Eve Hunter.

Indiana Speaker At North Robinson Meeting

C. K. Whistler, director of livestock marketing of the Indiana Farm Bureau at Indianapolis, Ind., will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Producers Livestock Cooperative Association of Bucyrus, according to William Miller, manager.

The meeting will be held at the Central school in North Robinson, the night of Feb. 2. This site was chosen, Mr. Miller pointed out, because of its central location in the area served by the markets at Bucyrus and Galion, both of which are under the same management.

The Grange ladies of North Robinson will serve refreshments, and the Baublitz orchestra of New Washington will provide music, Mr. Miller reported.

HOT ASHES START FIRE

BUCYRUS—Hot ashes placed in a basket caused fire which damaged the residence of Mrs. Alice Love, 625 East Lucas street in the estimated amount of $300 Tuesday, and brought out the city fire department to the Love home on two occasions. The fire department worked to extinguish the flames which damaged a back porch at 9 o'clock and a second call an hour later was received when the blaze started again within a wall.

TALK GIVEN BY YOUTH LEADER

U. S. President on Program Given at Luncheon Attended by 200.

By ELAINE BALLINGER

At a luncheon meeting of the Marion Christian Youth Movement Tuesday, part of the observance of Youth week here, more than 200 young people, adult advisors and guests heard Miss Kitty Kline, president of the national United Christian Youth Movement. The session was held in the dining room of Trinity Baptist church. Special music was by a quartet from Harding High school, and L. G. Jones, public school music supervisor, led group singing. Rev. J. B. Holloway, host pastor, offered the prayer at table. James Rea, M.C.Y.M. president, was in charge, and Richard A. Howard of Marion, president of the Ohio Christian Youth council, introduced the speaker.

Tells of Oslo Meeting

Miss Kline, whose home is at Kutztown, Pa., brought greetings from the greater U.C.Y.M. which she said is composed of 10 million young people of Canada and this country, of which the Marion group is a part. She then told of experiences of the American delegation at the World Christian youth conference at Oslo, Norway, last summer, of which she was a member, among 1,500 young people from 71 nations.

An important and unique contribution of the conference was a view which enabled those there "to look at the world and the church through the eyes of other young people." This, she related, was a picture of the hunger, the plight of the displaced persons of the world, a sense of the meaning of the world international situation, the economic distress of the countries and the struggles of the common people of the world confronted in their daily living. It emphasized with clarity, she said, that "we today must be world citizens."

Reason for Hope

In looking at the church, with its denominations and its differences, encouragement was found in the fact that above and beyond these things was the acknowledgement that "Jesus Christ is Lord," and the vision of a world Christian community more clearly seen, she declared. The Oslo conference revealed no new challenge, she said, but brought the feeling that "something must be done now, and that we, by declaring ourselves as Christian youth, admit our world responsibility, and, with the atom bomb behind us and heaven knows what in front, do something about it, such as is symbolized perhaps in a paraphrase of our childhood prayer, 'I pray the Lord my soul to keep,' that I may wake before I die."

In charge of arrangements for the meeting was Miss Marjorie Middleton. Composing the quartet were James Hill, Jack Hoffman, Robert Ralston and James Coss, and accompanist was Frederick Lacey. Women of the church served the luncheon.

MARION CO. OFFICIALS AT DISTRICT MEETING

Four Marion county officials will be in attendance today at the quarterly meeting of the Midwestern County Officials association at Celina. Commissioners Carl H. Lehner, William Risch, Luther Mitchell, and Walter Guthrie, board clerk, left this morning to attend the gathering at which Dr. Tennyson Guyer will be the main speaker. Dr. Guyer gave an address here at the First Evangelical and Reformed church on South Prospect street Monday night.

The Midwestern County Officials association membership includes officials of 30 Ohio counties.

CASE TO TRUMAN. Civic legal committee plans appeal to President Truman to intervene in an Army review board's order sentencing 18-year-old Pvt. Thomas A. Gusik, Cleveland, O., to 16 years of hard labor in Chillicothe, O., Federal reformatory. The soldier had been convicted in Leghorn, Italy, for slaying two Italian black market thieves last September.

SOCIAL HELD BY GROUPS OF RAINBOW DIVISION

Members of Dyer J. Bird chapter, Rainbow Division of Ohio, and the Ladies Auxiliary to the chapter held a joint social meeting Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jacobs on East Church street. A potluck supper was served, followed by the chapter and auxiliary meetings, with Cloy Hartshorn and Mrs. Ray Martin presiding, respectively.

The auxiliary voted a contribution of $5 to the March of Dimes and communications from the Dayton Veterans hospital were read by Mrs. Catherine Hartshorn. The mystery box was won by Mrs. Dave Knickle. A dinner will be held for both the chapter and the auxiliary Feb. 22 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hartshorn on Merkel avenue in commemoration of the First Battalion of the 166th Infantry answering the front line trench calls in the year 1918.

SIX PUPILS COMPETE IN CONTEST TODAY

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 28 — Churchmen looked to the future and held out a four-year college scholarship for one of six high school pupils participating in the 23rd annual Prince of Peace declamation contest finals today during the Ohio Pastors' convention.

Winners of district elimination contests, the students appeared at a general assembly of the 3,000 pastors attending the twenty-ninth annual convention. Two-year and one-year scholarships awaited second and third place finalists.

Climaxing the competition were Tom Clark of Coshocton; Dorothy Martin of Dayton; Mary Lou McConnell of Alliance, Kyle Bingham of Fostoria; Robert K. Schmidt of Newton Falls, and Gloria Davis of Columbus.

Dr. William N. Blair, Presbyterian missionary to Korea, and Dr. Harold Cooke Phillips, Cleveland, convention chairman, preceded the declamation contest finals with convention addresses. Dr. Blair spoke on "Behind the Iron Curtain," and Dr. Phillips "Trusting Our Best Moments."

Dr. Sherwood Eddy, a Far East missionary for 51 years, who recently returned from a tour of six European countries, told a fellowship dinner last night Germany needs prompt and adequate support. He also declared adoption of the Marshall plan was the "only hope in sight to make possible the recovery of western Europe."

Dr. Eddy said "Molotov's ambition" to succeed Stalin as head of the Soviets "threatens Europe with World War III."

Urging use of a $6,000,000,000 export trade balance a year for three years to "make possible the recovery of western Europe, avert Communist dictatorships and, incidentally, save America herself from a depression," Dr. Eddy said the United States could choose either to "avert a Communist revolution and a world depression, or we can lose our own souls and perish amid our misers' gold."

Punctured Main Lowers Bucyrus Gas Supply

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS—A punctured main belonging to the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. Tuesday lowered the supply of gas in a section of the city for a short period and made detouring of traffic necessary for safety.

The gas main was punctured by workers for the Ohio Power Co. who were setting new poles for the new Bucyrus-Shelby line along the Lincoln highway east of Bucyrus.

A heavy odor of gas pervaded the area until gas company repairmen could close the break. The gas line was carrying 80 pounds pressure, Manager Ken Gallant of the gas company reported.

As a precaution against automobiles igniting the gas all traffic was routed over the Galion road to the North Robinson road for an hour and a half.

Your Good Health

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

Correct Diet of Mother-to-Be

During the past 25 years, research has established beyond all doubt that good health requires good food to maintain it. Quite literally, the body benefits in a thousand ways by a well-balanced diet.

Only recently, however, have we come to realize what this kind of eating may mean to the expectant mother and her unborn child. Recent scientific studies show that the diet of women even prior to pregnancy is important to the health of their children. If this is so, it is easy to understand the great necessity of maintaining nutrition throughout the all-important months during which the child is being formed.

Today we have definite evidence on this score. It shows that lack of various substances found in food —vitamins, minerals and proteins —over a long period of time, may interfere with proper development before birth, thus producing defects in the baby, hinder breast feeding afterwards, and so lead to disease.

In the last 35 years, the death rate among infants under one year of age has been reduced by 82 per cent. That is a record of which we may all be proud and yet, in this same period of time, the number of babies who die at birth or within the first 30 days of life has dropped only 1.8 per cent. In other words, all our marvelous progress in saving babies has occurred in the one month to one year period Today, many doctors feel that the newer knowledge of nutrition has given us the clue to an equal accomplishment in safeguarding the very beginning of life.

Many experiments have been carried out to show the part played by diet in the health of the mother-to-be and her baby. For example, a study was made on more than 5000 mothers. Half of them were given a dietary supplement containing vitamins and minerals Those women who received these supplements had fewer babies born before the normal time Furthermore, there was a decrease in the number of infant deaths and stillbirths.

Good nutrition is also important in aiding in the mother's recovery after the birth of the baby, as well as in her ability to nurse her baby and, of course, no food has ever been found so satisfactory for a baby as breast milk.

Thus, it would seem that better nutrition of the mother-to-be would result in fewer stillbirths, fewer cases of anemia, toxemia or poisoning, and reduced infant mortality.

Many figures have been collected which seem to show that about one-third of the people in the United States are underfed. One reason, of course, is lack of money to buy enough food, but another, which affects a great many more people, is lack of knowledge as to the right foods to buy, even where money is no consideration. In view of this, the expectant mother has no greater duty towards herself and her child than to consult her physician as soon as possible to make sure that she is eating the proper diet throughout her pregnancy.

Questions and Answers

A. S.: Will you please tell me why my six-year-old child grinds his teeth while he is asleep at night?

Answer: Grinding the teeth is a sign of nervousness, and the treatment of it consists in proper hygiene

The child should sleep a sufficient number of hours in a quiet room, with enough covers over him. He should not be fed or given anything to drink during the night. The diet for such a child should consist of plenty of green vegetables and fresh fruits.

Springfield Lady Lost 30 Lbs. Husband Well Pleased

"I have lost 30 lbs while taking Rennel Concentrate," writes Mrs. Wm. Walke, 1676 Catawa Ave., Springfield 2, Ohio, "I feel like a new person and always keep an extra bottle of Rennel handy for it is my faithful stand-by. I would never want to try anything else. I am 43 years of age and my husband and my friends say I look much younger for now I am so slim."

Hundreds of others have obtained similar relief from the social and physical discomfort of being overweight. Rennel is the original grapefruit juice recipe for taking off ugly fat. It's simple. Just go to your druggist and ask for 4 ounces of liquid Rennel. Pour the contents into a pint bottle—add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Then take just two tablespoonfuls a day. That's all there is to it. If the very first bottle doesn't show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves—a reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic, from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles; just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. You need never know a hungry moment while taking Rennel—no starvation diet—no printed diet list to buy—no vitamins to fortify you against weakness while going hungry, for you WON'T be hungry. Don't be switched to another product. Insist on and obtain genuine Rennel.

DIES AT MACHINE BREAKS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Jan. 28—Vincent Patton, 42, of Cleveland Heights, was killed and two others injured yesterday when an experimental tooling machine flew apart at the Patton Co.

EMERGENCY

—into the streets to canvass business etablishments with a request for decreased gas consumption.

Columbus business concerns heated by gas, with the exception of restaurants, were urged either to close or reduce their heat to a bare minimum. Company employes in numerous Ohio cities went on similar errands.

The East Ohio Gas Company, serving northeastern Ohio, stopped all service to industrial users, affecting some 600 plants.

Rural schools in several areas closed.

Two Below Here

Marion thermometers dropped to two below zero last night. At 8 a. m. it was one below and at noon had risen to 11 above. The high yesterday was 18 above. The temperature a year ago today registered a high of 37 and a low of 14 above. The forecast for Marion is "fair tonight, not so cold in the north portion; Thursday cloudy and milder."

The state highway department reported a temperature range of from 27 below, at New Lexington, to eight above in its early morning check.

Dayton reported 3,500 workers idle because of the gas shortage and other cities were reported to have comparable numbers idle in plants lacking stand-by oil or coal facilities.

Overnight lows reported included:

Hamilton, -15, the lowest in 12 years, with some houses cold because coal yards were unable to meet a rush of orders; Akron, -10; Salem, -10; Canton, -10; Athens, -19, and believed still dropping; Springfield, -10, a low for the winter; Bucyrus, -15, also a winter's low; Mt. Vernon, -13; Bladensburg, Knox county, -24; and Zanesville, -18; Chillicothe, -15, lowest since 1936; Cleveland, -3; Cincinnati, two above, with Lunken airport there showing -13; and Wooster, -22; and Lancaster, -18. Some rural schools were closed.

Cannelville, the little Muskingum county coal mine town which calls itself the "icebox of southeastern Ohio," reported -30 by the grocery store thermometer, and other hill and hollow villages in that section reported lows of between -18 and -28.

Homes Are Cold

In the Youngstown area gas for home heating was expected to go off for 275 homes in New Castle and New Wilmington, just across the state line in western Pennsylvania. These homes were without heat Monday, when the week-end zero wave was in full swing.

George Mindling, U. S. meteorologist here, reported that since Saturday, when the series of zero waves started, central Ohio temperatures had averaged six degrees above zero, or 22 degrees below the average for the last 63 years.

Today's average, on an expected reading of 12 here, was five, against a normal 28.

The winter has not been "outstanding," he said, because of warm weather in December and early January, and far from comparing with the record winters of 1903-04, 1917-18, and 1935-36. These had temperature averages for the three winter months of 22.3 degrees, 22.4, and 23.6 respectively.

Nevertheless, this winter has had sub-normal temperatures every day since Jan. 13 except for Jan. 23, he reported.

The death toll—in the east, south and midwest—was nearly 160.

The third cold wave in a week chilled residents from the Rockies to the Atlantic coast.

California did not escape the antics of the elements. Gusts of 85 miles an hour swept through Ontario, Calif., and winds of between 50 and 60 mph in other parts of the San Bernardino valley yesterday.

East Ohio Cuts Off Industrial Gas

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Jan. 28 — East Ohio Gas Co. announced today a 100 per cent curtailment of gas supplied to the some 600 northern Ohio industries on its lines, effective immediately.

Some industries, the company said, will receive small amounts for plant maintenance but no gas will be furnished for manufacturing or processing until the cold snap lets up.

Residential consumers were unaffected by the order.

East Ohio serves the following areas: all of Cuyahoga county (more than half of its industrial customers are in Cleveland) except Parma and Bay Village; Youngstown, Akron, Warren, Canton, Barberton, Dover, New Philadelphia, Uhrichsville, Dennison, Wooster, Ravenna, and Niles.

A 50 per cent industrial curtailment has been in effect by East Ohio for more than a week.

C. & O. LINE TO OPEN HUGE COAL FIELDS

By The Associated Press

JENKINS, Ky., Jan. 28—The Chesapeake and Ohio railway announced today that as soon as weather permits, it will complete the final link of a $3,000,000 project to open new coal fields with estimated reserves of 250,000,000 tons.

The railroad reported snow and ice held up laying of a track which will make possible passage of the first train through the new Pine Mountain tunnel. The work is expected to be completed later this week.

However, there will be no ceremony heralding the inauguration of the new line from the C. & O. Big Sandy valley division at Wayland, Floyd county, Ky., to Wise county, Va.

Boring of the new, 3,400-foot tunnel through Pine mountain, a natural barrier between Kentucky and Virginia, was finished last week, but several weeks of work remain to complete timbering and concreting.

AS sometimes happens in chess, the struggle between the Marion Angels semi-pro football team and the athletic board of Harding High school has apparently reached a stalemate. The Angels want to use the stadium gridiron; the board says no.

The fight broke into the open again late last fall when the board resolved to limit play on the stadium gridiron to games involving school teams—Harding, St. Mary, and the junior highs—to check deterioration of the greensward. The move cut the Angels right off the turf.... "Rooked," they cried. "Check, your move," replied the board.

The Angels went to city council and trotted out what they hoped would be a powerful queen to route the board's castle after first proposing that the council re-let Lincoln park on a seasonal basis so that when the Cubs were done with baseball, the Angeles done with baseball, the Angels proposal was voted down, but the council supplied the queen in the form of a three-man committee to meet with the school board relative to opening the Harding stadium to Angel play. The school board referred the committee to the athletic board, and the board refused to meet, thereby effecting a stalemate.

Gene Fetter, coach of the Angels and guiding the strategy in the current game, still has some pieces left and hopes yet to crack the stalemate. "We'll keep plugging," said he.

Dewey N. Bohyer, Harding athletic director and head of the board, says the stadium policy has already been set and a meeting would only lead to bad feeling and allow pressure to be put upon them. "We don't want a small commercial firm to high-pressure us into using the stadium," said he, "that's what happened last year."

The varsity score was Magnetic 46, Green Camp 23. Magnetic tripled the score of the local squad in the first half and then coasted the rest of the way. Robison, with 17, and Disbennet, with 13, led the Magnetic parade. Roettger had six points for Green Camp.

The Green Camp Reserves continued their winning ways, taking the visitors, 24 to 16. The reserves have only lost three games all season, and local basketball followers are looking forward to have a winning combination next season.

In an abbreviated game preceding the reserve tilt Magnetic Junior High defeated the local squad 12 to 8.

ST. MARY CAGERS RUN OVER MORRAL, 54-34

Dick Schuler Nets 24 Points To Pace Irish To 12th Victory

St. Mary chalked up their twelfth win in a one-sided game last night, defeating the Morral High cagers, 54-34, on the losers' court.

St. Mary's big margin was gained mostly in the first quarter in which the Irish outpointed their opponents 18 to 4. Weston and McCumber each scored a basket for the Morral points. St. Mary scoring was by Dick Schuler with seven, John Baldauf with three, Dick Drake and Dan Smith with a two-pointer apiece, and Bob Stuber who made two shots from behind the foul line.

Morral, although never outscoring the Irish in any quarter greatly diminished the one-sidedness of the score by trailing in the scoring only one point in the second period. St. Mary marked up 13 points to Morral's 12. Granlee and Augenstein scored two buckets apiece and McCumber and Merle Hilborne one apiece to account for Morral's 12 points. Schuler, Baldauf, Drake and Stuber accounted for the Marion team's points. The score at halftime was 31-16 in favor of the Fighting Irish.

Offense Bogs Down

The offensive play of both teams bogged down in the third quarter with St. Mary outscoring Morral nine to seven. Forward Schuler of the Irish sank all of the Irish points, while Hilborn, Weston and Baer collected the Morral tallies. The Irish led, 40-23, at the end of the third frame.

In the third stanza, the St Mary varsity scored six points on two baskets by Schuler and one by Bob Stuber. With four minutes remaining in the game, Coach Gene Fetter sent in his second team and a few seconds later Morral Coach Norman Weston followed suit.

Both teams bested the starting aggregations. Bill Merchant, Jim Moloney and his cousin Ed Moloney dominated the Irish scoring, and Weston, McCumber, Wright and Williams hit for Morral's 11 tallies.

The victors' success can largely be attributed to their better brand of ball handling. Morral was plagued by bad and intercepted passes all evening. The control of rebounds was about equal but the Irish accuracy made up the difference.

Reserves Win

The St. Mary reserves defeated the Morral reserves, 34-23. The junior Irish also jumped to an early lead in this tilt and led the Morral jayvees all the way. Bill Merchant paced the St. Mary reserves with 20 markers.

BLIZZARD PILES UP OLYMPIC TROUBLE

Covers St. Moritz Ice Rinks, Ski Runs.

By The Associated Press

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 28—A swirling blizzard raged in St. Moritz today, piling up tons of trouble on ski runs and ice rinks. The storm eclipsed in the eyes of most athletes the alphabetical battle over whether it will be the AHA or USOC representing the United States in the Olympic hockey games Friday.

Starting at dusk, the storm had frosted the Olympic capital with six inches of snow by midnight. The temperature was just below freezing.

A weekend snow already had left the games site in not too good shape.

Ice rinks yesterday had to be cleared enough to permit full use by hockey players, figure and speed skaters.

But bad weather did not effect the jury weighing the big indoors pre-Olympic battle — Amateur Hockey Association vs. the U. S. Olympic committee.

With arrival late yesterday of the last two members of the executive committee of the International Olympic committee, this body was ready to consider officially which of the hockey teams sent here by the two American sports organizations would represent the United States.

AHA Team Matched Against Swiss Friday

By The Associated Press

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 28 — The executive committee of the International Olympic committee, meeting as a "jury of honor," today notified the Swiss they must reject both rival United States ice hockey teams as contestants in the winter Olympic games.

* * *

ST. MORITZ, SWITZERLAND, Jan. 28—The International Ice Hockey Federation matched the Amateur Hockey Association of America team today against Switzerland to open the Olympic games Friday at 11 a. m.

The International Ice Hockey Federation thus stood pat on its decision to include the Amateur Hockey Association group. Avery Brundage, chairman of the U. S. Olympic committee, had opposed the AHA as the official United States representative and had sought to have the U. S. Olympic committee's team substituted.

The draw took place while the executive committee of the International Olympic committee was weighing the arguments of the U. S. Olympic committee against the AHA representing the United States.

The AHA team was expected to arrive today from Zurich, where it defeated the Town Club last night, 11 to 4.

The draw for the hockey tournament matched these teams after the opening game:

Jan. 30 at 2 p. m.—Canada vs. Sweden; Poland vs. Austria; Czechoslovakia vs. Italy.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

by Hugh S. Fullerton jr

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 28—Spec Shea and Ralph Branca, opposing pitchers in the first game of the 1947 world series, were sitting side by side at the Connecticut sports writers' alliance dinner discussing jinxes. . . . Shea has been mentioned as a possible victim of the "second year jinx" that often afflicts ball players and some hot stove talk has concerned the possibility that Branca will be jinxed by his world series beatings. . . . They both agreed to laugh it off, but the solemn-faced Branca did a better job than confident-looking Spec. . . . "Why worry about things like that?" asked Ralph. "We play 154 games every year and I figure I'll win my share. I should be a better pitcher next season than I was last year." . . . Shea assented, between autographs. . . . And at another table Yankee boss George Weiss remarked: "When you see those two signing their names so fast, you wonder why neither one has signed his contract."

AFTER THE SAME festive gathering someone asked Leo Durocher about Curt Simmons, the Phillies' expensive rookie hurler, and got another question in reply, . . . "Who is he? Just a high school kid isn't he?" Leo demanded. . . . A reporter remarked that he had heard that Ben Chapman claimed he wouldn't trade Simmons for Ewell Blackwell. . . . Durocher laughed uproariously: "He'd better trade his whole pitching staff for Blackwell—if he can get him."

DOGS STRAIN AT LEASH FOR FIELD TRIAL DERBY

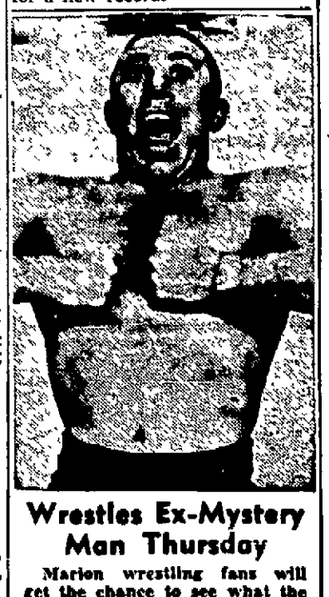

By The Associated Press

SHUQUALAK, Miss., Jan. 28—Sixteen of the nation's best quail-tracking dogs strained at their leashes today waiting for weather which would allow running of the National Field Trial club's derby championship.

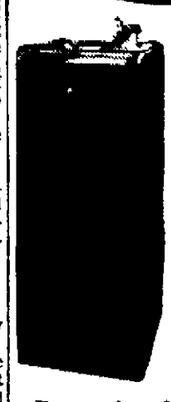

The annual stakes were to have started yesterday, but ice and snow covered the Nunn plantation near here and runnings were delayed.

Although the derby entry list is shorter than last year's, names of such prominent pointers and setters as Tennessee Zev, Westerner, and Snapetoon are included in the first running braces.

The all-age free-for-all championship stakes beckoned 39 dogs for a new record.

Wrestles Ex-Mystery Man Thursday

Marion wrestling fans will get the chance to see what the Mystery Man looks like Thursday when he wrestles Paul Orth in one of the 90 minute main events. All last year nobody was able to beat the masked grappler and so he never took off his mask, but Thursday he will wrestle without the mask, and his name is Len Hughes of Boston.

The other main event should rival the above match for it brings back one of the most popular wrestlers to ever show at the Armory. Renee LaBell, the fast and clever Canadian. LaBell will meet a newcomer to Marion, Jack Poppenheim of Milwaukee, who is just as clever and fast as the Canadian. Both matches are for the best two out of three falls, with the first bout getting underway at 8:30.

"UP" BEARCATS TAKE BUTLER QUINT 72-53

Ohio Northern Drops Findlay; Wilmington Stops Bliss.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 28—The University of Cincinnati may not be the nation's most inconsistent basketball quintet this season, but the Bearcats probably have few challengers.

Cincy was "up" last night and took Butler university's "hot shots" into camp, 72-53, just 24 hours after the Hoosiers trimmed Ohio State at Columbus, 57-47.

The win—seventh in 13 games—went alongside such Cincinnati season "highmarks" as defeats of Utah and Western Reserve, and helped offset losses such as those suffered to so-so Valparaiso, and Miami.

In two other games involving Ohio collegians, Ohio Northern scored its fourth win in 10 starts, handing Findlay's Oilers their ninth loss in 10 games, 57-51, and Wilmington stopped Bliss Business college, 65-49.

Ralph Richter, a six foot-four inch forward, tossed 29 points to pace Cincinnati. The Bearcats, taking advantage of their height, and the cramped confines of their gym, intercepted Butler passes night-long.

Butler led, 14-12, in the first five minutes of play. Then Cincy caught fire, moved in front, 21-16, and never trailed.

The win gave Cincy the Mid-American conference lead with a two up-one down record.

Tonight Kent State risks its Ohio conference lead at Mount Union. Findlay is at Defiance. Bluffton at Cedarville and Youngstown at Marshall.

CHISOX TRADE TUCKER FOR TRIBE'S WEIGEL

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 28—The straight trade of outfielder Thurman Tucker for the Cleveland Indians' rookie catcher, Ralph Weigel, today was announced by the Chicago White Sox.

Tucker, who is 30, from Gordon Tex., and resembles Joe E. Brown in appearance, came to the White Sox in 1940 and had his best season in 1946 when he batted .288 in 121 games. Last season, he batted .236 in 89 games.

Weigel, 27 from Dayton, O., last season earned another shot with the Indians by batting .289 in 107 games for Baltimore in the International league.

CAREY, Jan. 28—Carey's Blue Devils had a tough night of it with the Clyde High school five as they were outscored in every period except the third, but they held to a three point margin going into the final frame and squeezed out a two point margin of victory, 46-44, here last night. Center Bill Dennison again paced the Carey crew as he compiled 19 markers in the hard-fought game. Tenzer, from his forward spot, led Clyde with 18 tallies.

23 Operations Save Leg And Baseball Career

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28—Twenty-three operations saved a leg doctors wanted to amputate for Leland Victor (Lou) Brissie, Jr., the southpaw Connie Mack predicts will be greater than Bob (Lefty) Grove.

Brissie 23-years-old, six feet, four inches tall and 213 pounds signed a Philadelphia Athletics' contract yesterday thus becoming the club's only portside hurler. The A's went through the 1947 season with an all right handed mound corps.

Brissie was wounded in the Apennine mountains of northern Italy and after doctors were reasonably sure he had a chance to live they decided to amputate his leg.

"You can't," Lou protested. "I'll never be able to play baseball again."

Operate Instead

So the medics operated 23 times and saved the limb. The bone and nerves even now are covered by little more than skin around Brissie's ankle. He has to wear a shin guard off as well as on the diamond.

His playing for the Athletics is no mere accident or chance. That's the way the boy's father, who died in 1946, wanted it. The parent turned down offers from the New York Yankees, St. Louis Browns, Detroit Tigers, Boston Red Sox and Brooklyn Dodgers when his offspring was but 16.

"Wait until you hear what Connie Mack has to say," he told young Lou.

Mack sent the boy to Presbyterian college where he played under Chick Galloway, an old Athletics' infielder. Last year Brissie pitched for the A's Savannah farm club in the South Atlantic league.

Wins 23 Games

He compiled a regular season mark of 23 victories and five defeats leading the league in most complete games, 25; earned run average, 1.91; shutouts, two, and strikeouts, 278. He fanned 17 men in one game—a record equalling performance—and established a new strikeout high for the nine year-old circuit.

In addition, Brissie won three games in leading Savannah to a win in the Sally league playoffs.

New York Stock Quotations

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—Railroad shares maintained their steady tone in today's stock market although many other sections of the list displayed irregularity.

Most price changes were narrow in a fairly active opening. Initial gains were fairly well held near midday.

Much of the bidding again was attributed to professionals seeking issues believed ripe for recovery after recent slides.

Higher were Union Carbide (on a split-up proposal), U. S. Steel, Gulf Oil (ex-rights), Texas Co., Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Illinois Central, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Schenley, General Motors, American Smelting, American Tobacco "B," Deere and Oliver Corp. Lagging were Goodrich, International Harvester, Phelps Dodge and Public Service of N. J.

Bonds were narrow and cotton futures uneven.

NAMES OF 1,200 VOTERS REMOVED

Must Register Again To Regain Ballot Rights.

More than 1,200 names were removed from the list of eligible voters in the city of Marion by the board of elections in preparing the registers for the May primaries, board officials reported today.

The figure obtained after lists had been checked was 1,235. Total registration for 1947 was 14,852. The check a year ago removed 3,000 names following a peak registration of 17,258 for 1946.

Names of those who have not voted for two consecutive years are taken off the list as are the names of residents who have moved out of the city area during the period since last registering. Voters who wish to exercise their privilege after letting their registration lapse, must register again to vote in the primaries and November election this year.

Registration may be made anytime except within 28 days before and ten days after both the primaries and election. Deadline date for the May primary would be April 6.

CIRCLE ENROLLS MEMBERS

New members were enrolled and guests were present at a meeting of the Lucy Webb Hayes circle of Epworth Methodist church Thursday night in the home of Mrs. Leah Alexander on Cherry street. Mrs. Grace Fletcher and Mrs. Gertrude Townsend were enrolled. Mrs. Louise Fogle was elected promotion secretary. Devotions were in charge of Miss Cleo Finley assisted by Mrs. Maude Robinson and Mrs. Hazel Fields. Miss Etta Carter directed lesson study. A report was given of 37 sick calls made. Assistant hostesses were Mrs. Mae Shipley, Mrs. Florence Acker and Mrs. Beulah Cathers.
